PILOT TERMS HIS FLIGHT TEST OF AIR COMMERCE

Dick Merrill, only man in history to have made a commercial round trip airplane flight across the Atlantic Ocean, gives a dramatic account of the flight in the following article, the first of three being prepared especially for Universal Service by the famous pilot.

By DICK MERRILL

Famous Transatlantic Flyer

World Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service. All right reserved. Reproduction in whole or part prohibited.

New York, May 15—The day of transatlantic flying on a regular commercial basis has arrived.

I have completely satisfied myself on that point by my four flights across the ocean. And certainly I have flown through weather which made the task no easier.

Especially this last round trip, and particularly the last leg we have just completed, was a real test of the practicability of modern ocean flying.

John T. Lambie, my co-pilot, and I never saw the surface after we left Ireland until we came down to check our gas at Squantum, Mass., before coming on here.

The weather was as thick as soup and we flew by instruments, flew "blind," all the way.

FLEW LOW ALL WAY

To take advantage of more favorable, or rather less unfavorable winds, we flew low all the way. Over the ocean we were never higher than 1500 feet and the top altitude of the entire flight was only 2000.

Up higher there were stiff head winds and we wanted to make the flight all in one jump so we took it low. There we still met head winds but not strong enough to deter us much.

We could have come direct to Floyd Bennett Field, but a gas gauge went out of commission and so we could not tell with any degree of accuracy just how much fuel we had left.

For that reason we came down through the fog and found ourselves just where we figured we were, directly over Boston. We slid down to a landing at Squantum and checked. There was enough gas so we came on in to Floyd Bennett without any trouble.

Speaking of that gas guage, that was the only part of the ship that gave us the slightest trouble. The engines worked perfectly and the ship functioned with absolute accuracy.

Planes have reached a stage of perfection now so that there should be no reason against regular trans-Atlantic plane service, although of course when such a service is started soon bigger ships manned by bigger crews will be used.

It doesn't take a dare-devil or a hero or even an aviator of superhuman ability to fly the planes we now have across the Atlantic.

"ANY PILOT CAN DO IT"

Any pilot from the regular commercial air lines can do it. Lambie and I happen to both work for Eastern Air Lines, but the boys flying the ships on any of the Great American air lines could do just as well.

I want to be very positive in stressing the fact that this was in no way a stunt flight or any kind of "trick" flight. It was a business trip and we carried it out with the ordinary precision of other business happenings.

On this last flight, for instance, we were warned not to take off because of "unfavorable weather," but we had a job to do and we had to get off. The day has passed when Atlantic fliers have to wait around days or weeks for perfect weather.

Of course the result was that we didn't have as easy a crossing as we might have if we had waited. There was rain and fog all the way, and last night there were plenty of squalls that tossed us around over the Atlantic ocean.

But none of that makes any difference if you have a schedule to meet, and we proved that this can be done with present day ships regardless of the weather.

We are a little tired of course as we didn't allow ourselves any sleep on the way over. Another time I would probably arrange things differently so each pilot could get some sleep.

As it was, we shifted turns at the controls and our present fatigue is nothing that a few hours sleep won't fix.

BACK ON THE JOB

I'm going to rest a couple of days and then I'm going back on the job, flying my regular route for Eastern Air Lines.

Lambie plans to do the same thing. He's younger than I am and so I don't believe he's as tired. And speaking of that boy I'd like to pay tribute to a great flier and a fine man.

We've made a round trip across the Atlantic together and we're better friends now than when we started out. We must be almost the only set of ocean fliers able to say that.

Aside from this inconsequential fatigue the only thing we suffered was temporary deafness and that was our own fault.

We had some cotton to put in our ears but we lost or mislaid it and so the steady roar of the engines has made us pretty deaf. But that will pass off quickly.

As I said this was just a routine trip, a round trip flight over the ocean on a job of business—that was to bring back pictures of the coronation of George VI.

We took turns at the controls. We ate sandwiches when we were hungry and drank water or coffee when we were thirsty.

And despite the fact we were going it blind all the way and were tossed around a little we never for even a fleeting moment had any feeling of doubt that we would arrive, and arrive pretty close to schedule.

To us it was just a routine flight on the air line we work on all the time.

It just happened to be a little longer and to be mostly over water. But that didn't affect the efficiency of the ship and it made no difference to us.

I wish we could have had more time in London to take part in the coronation gaiety but we were on a business trip and so we couldn't wait.

To give you a better idea of how ocean flying has advanced—and its advance has been at least in part achieved as a result of these flights which some people still call "stunts"—look at the way we were dressed.

In the earlier flights a pilot was dressed in flying suit and helmet and all the trappings of the early days of flying.

Now we wear our regular everyday business suits, just step into the plane as we are on one side of the ocean and ride along till we get to the other side.

The next ocean flight I expect to make is the New York to Paris race which is scheduled for some date in August still to be fixed.

And you can bet your life Lambie is going to be my partner on that flight, too.

We've both had ocean flying experience and most important of all we are the kind of friends who stay friends.

But until then we'll work along on the air line, routine flying of course, but it doesn't seem any more routine to us than these ocean flights now.

Flying is flying and with good ships and trained men there is no reason why the men trained in the strict school of commercial flying over the land should not engage in regular transatlantic piloting as soon as such a service is established.

Merrill Scores Big 'Beat' With Coronation Pictures

Then on his return flight from Southport, Eng., to New York, he brought the first actual photographs of the British coronation to reach America.

Not only was Merrill's feat a milestone in the history of commercial aviation, but it was also an achievement of world note in newspaper enterprise.

The Boston Evening American and other Hearst papers throughout the United States are today publishing the picture story of the coronation days in advance of all competitors.

Fast steamships of half a dozen lines are still racing today across 3000 miles of ocean with the pictures which readers of this and associated newspapers have already spread before them.

Arabs Strike, 200 Jailed

Haifa, Palestine, May 15 (AP)—An Arab strike was called here and in the neighboring coastal city of Acre today. All Arab shops were closed and 200 hunger-striking Arabs were jailed.

MERRILL'S RECORDS

(Copyright 1937, by Universal Service)

New York, May 15 (US)—Dick Merrill set up quite a few records when he brought his Lockhead-Electra into Floyd Bennett field.

Merrill and Harry Richman were the first fliers ever to make a round-trip flight of the Atlantic last September. Today Merrill is the only man ever to have made the round-trip twice.

Merrill and his co-pilot, Jack Lambie, are the first fliers to make the round trip within a four day period.

Merrill is the first pilot to bring his plane back from Europe without accident.

His was the first flight in which the same plane returned to the landing field from which it took off.

The flight was also the first commercial round-trip of an airplane. It was neither a stunt nor test flight but carried out for money.

Take-off from Floyd Bennett field, May 9, 4:36 p. m.

Landing, Croydon, May 10, 1:38 p. m. Elapsed time, 21 hours, 2 minutes.

Take-off from Southport, England, May 13, 4:15 p. m. Landing Floyd Bennett field, May 14, 4:35.20 p. m. Elapsed time, 24 hours, 20 minutes and 20 seconds.

Merrill Delivering Coronation Photos

Merrill Repeats

THE NEWS that Dick Merrill has flown to London and back is scarcely news any more.

As a young man who gets where he is going and gets back, he has demonstrated his fitness so often that the feat, though perhaps not less difficult with each repetition, is less surprising.

Merrill's round trip flight to London, with John Lambie as his capable companion, is in many ways one of the most remarkable adventures in aviation history.

That it suffers in brilliance because of its routine efficiency is proof of how far the conquest of the air, and particularly of the ocean air lanes, has advanced.

We should develop these resources, and assure ourselves of command of the fast-growing field of air commerce.

We would thus be also assured of the security which command of the air will be able to give in the possible wars of the future.

Mussolini Sticks to Policy

Rome, May 15 (AP)—Premier Mussolini today declared Italy's self-sufficiency program was a guarantee of peace and could not be abandoned "as the democracies would like."

Speaking before the annual meeting of the corporative guild, Il Duce pictured Italy's economic development in the last year and said:

"Economic autarchy is a guarantee of peace which we firmly desire. It is an impediment to war and on this point there is no hesitation in assuring the life and power of a great people like the Italian nation.

"The democracies would like to have the so-called authoritarian states renounce their autarchies in exchange for we do not know what counterpart.

"For us it is impossible in a world armed to the teeth to abandon such a policy. It would mean putting ourselves tomorrow, in case of war, at the mercy of those who have all and who can make war without limitation of time or consumption."

J. R. MacKinnon, Court Clerk, Dies

John R. MacKinnon, 47, of 309 Waverley avenue, Watertown, clerk of Middlesex Superior Court in Cambridge for the past two years, died at his home today.

MacKinnon had been seriously ill for six weeks. At the age of 22 he was appointed fourth assistant clerk of court for Middlesex County, making him the youngest court official in the state.

2 Killed in Auto Crashes; Nine Are Injured

Rain-soaked roads proved fatal to two motorists and many others suffered serious injuries in auto crashes in Greater Boston.

Henry A. Grow, 37, of Brookville, was killed in Holbrook today within 100 feet of his sister's home, when his automobile struck a tree at a curve and overturned. Grow, a night worker and fatherof three children, was on his way home when the accident occurred.

Retis R. Wheaton, 34, of Hesper street, Saugus, was instantly killed when the sedan in which he was riding along Eastern avenue, Malden, crashed into the rear of a heavy truck.

Ernest R. Swett, 37, of Hood street, Saugus, operator of the car, escaped death, but suffered serious head and chest injuries.

In Hyde Park, Stanley Sucheki, 21, of Dorchester avenue, South Boston, last control of his car when it skidded on the wet highway on River street, and crashed into the front of a store. A heavy granite block crashed onto the hood of the automobile.

Employes Share in Will of Jay's Founder

Urging that the shares he owns in Jay's, Inc., be sold to his employes and making provision for all who have given at least five years' service to the store, the will of Jay Abrams, founder of Jay's, specialty store, was filed in Suffolk Probate Court today.

The will makes provision for employes "as a slight token of my appreciation of their devotion and services to the business of Jay's, Inc."

Employes in service for five years and less than ten years get $100 each; those in ten years and less than 15 years get $200; every employe in the service since prior to January 1, 1919 gets $300.

The will reads:

"I herewith urge but do not require that my executors or trustees sell to the employes of Jay's, Inc., or any of them the shares of stock of Jay's, Inc., which I may own at the time of my death.

"The price to be paid for such stock, the terms of the sale, and the employes to whom such shares shall be made, are matters to be decided within the absolute discretion of my executors and trustees."

SPANISH REBEL CHIEF'S DEATH ATTEMPTED

London, May 15 (INS)—An attempt has been made on the life of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, leader of the Spanish rebellion, according to reliable information received in diplomatic quarters here today.

Strict censorship has been imposed to prevent leakage of information. It was not known definitely whether Franco was wounded but it was generally believed he had escaped injury. First reports indicated the attempt occurred at Salamanca.

Charge Periscope Seen Near Warship

Valencia, Spain, May 15 (INS)—Testimony that a submarine periscope was seen near the British destroyer Hunter when it was damaged by an explosion while patrolling off the coast of Spain was adduced today as an investigation of the blast got under way.

Previous indications in London and elsewhere were that British officials were more or less convinced the Hunter was damaged by running afoul of a mine.

Rebel Planes Wipe Out Whole Column

Toledo, Spain, May 15 (AP)—A column of government troops south of the Tajo River was reported today to have been virtually destroyed with bombs and machine gun fire in an insurgent air attack.

One of Gen. Francisco Franco's air squadrons, circling the battle lines of the government's offensive toward this ancient Moorish capital, sighted the column moving back from one of the central positions, an official report said, and swooped down on it.

Basque Militia Defends Bilbao

Bayonne, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 15 (AP)—The insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera, bolstering the land forces of Gen. Emilio Mola, shelled battle-scarred slopes of Mount Sollube today as Basque defense troops desperately attempted to block the way to Munguia, seven miles northeast of Bilbao.

A fierce battle raged below the mountain peak. The insurgents charged the government lines with fixed bayonets but apparently were unable to dislodge the Basque militiamen.

Pope Intervention Report Ridiculed

Paris, May 15 (INS)—Reports that Pope Pius has approached the Basque government with a view to ending the Spanish civil war were revived today but were ridiculed as "pure invention", by a Quai D'Orsay spokesman.

5 CHILDREN KILLED AS TRAIN HITS BUS

unaware that the train, an express from Washington and New York to Montreal, was running 45 minutes late.

The light sedan, crushed against the front of the locomotive, was carried about a train length.

Every person in the vehicle was killed and their bodies were strewn along the right of way.

RAIN OBSCURED VIEW

A light rain was falling at the time of the accident, investigators said, and posibly helped obscure the view of the unguarded crossing.

Engineer John W. Newton of the Central Vermont Railway said he sondeud the customary signal as his train sped toward the crossing.

Halting the train after the crash, members of the train crew leaped out and picked up the bodies of the victims. Ten-yearloid Earl Murray was still alive. He was placed in an automobile and hurried to a hospital in Burlington, a dozen miles away, but died soon afterward without regaining consciousness.

PROBERS BLOCKED

The fact that every person in the automobile was killed or rendered unconscious instantly prevented investigators from obtaining an explanation of the failure of the driver to see the train. They said there was a fair view of the tracks at the crossing.

They could only concude, they said, that his knowledge of train schedules led him to believe the express had passed and that the dark sky and falling rain had contributed to cut off his view.

Bodies of the victims were turned over to the selectmen of the town, who began an investigation of the accident.

19 Hurt in Bus Hit By Boston Truck

Cromwell, Ct., May 15 (AP)—Eighteen passengers and the driver of an interstate bus were injured or shaken up early today when it was sideswiped by a 20-ton trailer truck on Corey's Hill here.

Three of the passengers were admitted to Middlesex Hospital, Middletown, for treatment.

They were: Mrs. Elizabeth Reardon, 22, of (102 Sawyer street) Boston, possible fractured skull and a fractured finger; Mrs. Elizabeth Erickson, 42, of (31 Benefit street) Worcester, Mass., a fractured rib, lacerations and a possible fractured arm; and Mrs. Minnie Greenbaum, 40, of (2 Savin street) Roxbury, Mass., fracture of the right leg and ankle.

Constable Raymond Franklin of this town said he arrested Charles Augustine of New Haven, Ct., driver of the truck, on a reckless driving charge. The truck was owned by the Consolidated Trucking Co. of Boston.

Woman Overcome At Revere Fire

One woman was overcome by smoke and six families were driven to the street today when fire swept the old Beachmont hotel, Jones street, Revere. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

The woman who was overcome was carried out by firemen and was taken to a nearby doctor's office. She was not immediately identified.

The former hotel had been remodelled into apartments. Seven of a total of twelve were occupied.

The blaze started on the first floor and spread to the second and third floors.

Among those who were driven out were Mrs. Ruth Green, her son, Sydney and daughted, Janice; Mrs. I Flinkfeld, Hughie Flinkfeld, seven; Jackie Flinkfeld, eight, and a three-year-old Flinkfeld child; Mrs. Molly Duncan; Mrs. Minnie Stone and son, Melvin; Mrs. Minnie Rosenbaum, and Janitor Georfe Pickering.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Miller, also tenants of the building, were not at home at the time of the fire. Their apartment was damaged.

King's $16,000 Gems in Dump

Garden City, N. Y., May 15 (INS)—There's gold in the city dump of this Long Island town—$16,000 worth, to be exact. For that, you can thank Mrs. Dennis King, wife of the singing star.

She wrapped $16,000 of uninsured gems in tissue paper and the maid threw them out with the garbage at the Kings' Great Neck home.

Boy Hears First Words In 5 Years

Knoxville, Tenn., May 15 (AP)—A new world unfolded today for chubby, blue-eyed Billy Payne whose first five years have been spent in silence with his deaf mute parents.

For the first time in his life he romped with other children and happily spoke simple words like "Mommy," "Daddy," "ball" and "dog."

His kindergarten teacher, Miss Osie Bennett, said he has a vocabulary of 100 words now and is learning rapidly.

Billy lived in the mountains near Knoxville where he never heard a human voice. A month ago he and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Payne, came to the Volunteers of America home here. Captain W. W. Thom thought Billy, like his father and mother, was a deaf mute.

"It was by accident I learned he could hear," Thom said. "I blew my automobile horn and saw him jump."

WORLD WAITS FOR WALLY TO TELL BRIDAL PLANS

URGENT LONDON CALL SPOILS DUKE'S GOLF

Monts, France, May 15 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor, who gave up the British throne so he could marry whom he pleased and play golf when he felt like it, couldn't even finish his golf game today.

He had been on the Chateau de Cande course approximately two hours when an urgent telephone call from London sent him scurrying back to the chateau.

Just who was calling and why was not disclosed.

Some sources said the former King also talked at length last night to someone in London, but Herman L. Rogers, spokesman for the duke and Mrs. Marfield, reported Windsor was undisturbed.

(In London a titled friend of the former British monarcht said it had been "definitely fixed" Mrs. Warfield will not attain the title of "Her Royal Highness" after the marriage—at least "not immediately.")

A formal announcement on when the duke and Mrs. Warfield would be married was expected Monday or Tuesday. Indications now point to a June wedding.

King Holds All Trumps In Wally's Title Fight

London, May 15 (AP)—A titled friend of the Duke of Windsor asserted today "it is definitely fixed" that the duke's bride will not become "Her Royal Highness"—at least not immediately.

This intimate admitted the former monarch was most anxious to obtain for his bride his own royal style when they marry, probably next month.

"That is quite natural," said the friend, "for he wanted to make her queen."

The Duke's brother, King George VI, and the government hold all the trumps in the game, he added, but it was not ruled out that the King might raise the duchess to the rank of "H. R. H." after a lapse of time had dimmed the bitter feeling engendered by Edward's abdication.

Thus, the quarrel touched off by Edward's choice of an American-born commoner and divorcee for a wife appeared far from happy solution today despite the fact Prime Minister Baldwin is expected to retire this month.

The stern, firm-jawed premier, who led the fight to keep Edward from marrying Wallis Warfield, is expected to further his opposition to the romance through Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, who, political observers agree, is likely to be his successor.

Chamberlain's attitude was said to include support for the government's decision not to pension the former King.

Mrs. Warfield—assured through marriage of the rank of duchess—will stand as eighth lady of the British realm, whether she technically becomes a "royal highness" or not.

This apparently was assured by the shifting of the former King's banner of the order of the Garter from its first position in St. George's chapel, Windsor, to fourth position so that he ranks behind his younger brothers, the newly-crowned King and the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent.

Thus, when Mrs. Warfield marries the former monarch, she will rank below Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mother Mary, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, daughters of the King and Queen; Princess Royal Mary and the Duchesses of Gloucester and Kent.

Baltimore Women Cold in Wally's "H. R. H." Row

Baltimore, May 15 (AP)—England's empire-vexing question of whether Mrs. Wallis Warfield will be "her royal highness" after her marriage to former King Edward or just the "Duchess of Windsor" leaves the women of the city where she grew up cold and disinterested.

From the grand dames of society to the girls behind the five-and-ten counters, feminine Baltimore was more concerned today about a horse race than about Wally's royal title. A hosiery counter blonde said rather typically:

"Oh, I don't know anything about her titles. But, say, who is going to win the Preakness?"

A girl who works behind a candy counter had a slightly different, but no less casual answer.

"That," she said scooping another handful of candy into a bag, "is a question for the English to decide."

The empire problem apparently means less to social leaders than to the shopgirls. Of 12 representative members of society, ten had nothing to say. Another laughed and said it was all right either way.

Heavy Seas Balk Rescue of Ship

Lubec, Me., May 15 (AP)—Coast guardsmen were rebuffed by choppy sea today in four attempts to reach a three-masted schooner believed to be the Minas King, flying distress signals a mile off shore from Quoddy Head.

Boy Dies of Hurts After 'Hooking Ride' on Truck

Richard Good, 16-year-old English High School student, died today at City Hospital twelve hours after he was rushed there by a passing motorist who picked him up from a South End street.

Police said he had been forced from the back of a truck on which he had "hooked a ride."

Admitted to the hospital in an unconscious condition, the youth was identified late last night by his parents.

Good, according to police, tried to board a truck yesterday afternoon. As he hooked his hands onto the tail-board he was struck across the knuckles by one of three helpers riding in the truck. He plunged head first into the curbing. The driver of the truck, and his three helpers, will be questioned, police said.

FIVE HELD IN $25 BAIL EACH IN CLINTON RIOT

Clinton, May 15 (AP)—Five men charged with participating in a strike riot, which was quelled only after a police tear gas barrage, pleaded not guilty in district court today to charges of disturbing the peace. The cases were continued to Monday and each was held in $25 bail.

The disorder occurred last night in front oft he Colonial Press Co., Inc., plant. Before the police gained controle, 36 windows in the plant had been shattered with stones and an automobile had been overturned. The homes of two employes who have not joined the strikers were stoned.

A peaceful note entered the turbulent New England labor situation with announcement of settlement of a strike in the Milton Bradley plant in Springfield. Four hundred workers affiliated with the CIO had sat down in the plant seeking union recognition and bargaining rights.

Workers in three Lewiston, Me., shoe factories began voting today to determine whether they will be represented by the CIO in bargaining negotiations with manufacturers.

John D. Nolan, secretary of the United Shoe Workers of America, was in the county jail at Auburn after surrendering to serve a six months term for violation of an injunction against the shoe strike. Three Lewiston girls appealed sentences of three months for stoning the home of a non-striking shoe worker.

Governor Lewis O. Barrows of Maine announced "positive indications of speedy settlement" of the strike after conference with CIO counsel and shoe manufacturers.

More than 125 workers in the White Brothers mill in Peterboro, N. H., were out on strike in protest against their failure to get 48 hours pay for a 40-hour week. It is believed an adjustment will be made by Monday.

Col. George Seaman Dies

St. Louis, May 15 (AP)—Colonel George Grant Seaman, 50, United States Army, retired, died here early today in a hospital. He served on the general staff at Washington before his retirement.

14 Flee Weymouth Blaze, Next to Fire Station

Fourteen persons narrowly escaped death early today when fire raced through a three-story wooden house in Lincoln square, Weymouth, next door to the fire station.

They were saved only through the chance discovery of the blaze by Harold Dowd, 32, Weymouth police officer and tenant in the house.

Without even taking time to telephone the fire station next door he rushed to the rear of the apartment, awakened his mother, Mrs. Josephine Dowd, 64, and led her to safety down the rear outside stairway.

His two brothers, Carlton, 37; James, 27, awoke and fled to the street, taking a nephew, William Amabile, seven, with them.

While the flames gained rapid headway, Carlton and James rushed up the stairs and aroused occupants of the third floor. Harold knocked on the window of the fire station and informed firemen of the blaze.

FORD IN FIRST MOVE TO BATTLE CIO

Detroit, May 15 (AP)—The first apparent move of the Ford Motor Company to oppose unionization of its 150,000 employes in the United States was revealed today.

An announcement that cards bearing Henry Ford's views on labor organizations and policies will be circulated among the workers Monday came soon after the union indicated that it would seek a closed shop in General Motors plants.

Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director, made public the cards—labeled "Fordisms" — that will be circulated among the employes.

"We have always made a better bargain for our men than an outsider could," they inform the workers. "We have never had to bargain against our men. And we don't expect to begin now."

The statement adds that "our men ought to consider whether it is necessary to pay some outsider every month for the privilege of working at Ford's." It decries the outcome of recent automotive strikes as being "merely that numbers of men put their necks into an iron collar."

"Figure it out for yourself. If you go into a union, they have got you and what have you got?"

The cards conclude with the statement that "a little group of those who control both capital and labor will sit down in New York and settle prices, dividends and wages."

Three Independents Next CIO Targets

Pittsburgh, May 15 (UP)—As the nation's first major steel strike in 18 years was settled—that in the big Jones and Laughlin plants—John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization cleared the decks for action today against three more big independents.

The independents threatened as the next CIO targets are Bethlehem, Republic and Youngstown Sheet and Tube. Workers in all these independent steel plants total 200,000.

Notice has been served on Bethlehem that it has 10 days in which to sign, the alternative being a strike.

Psalm-Singing Killer in Coma, Girl Sobs

BERNICE FELTON LESTER BROCKELHURST

Near Collapse in Cells After Admitting Amazing Crimes

PAIR HAUNTED BY CONSCIENCE

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 15 (INS)—As G-Men and officials of three states began a scramble to claim psalm-singing Lester Brockelhurst and his 18-year-old sweetheart for trial on murder charges, the young couple were reported near a state of physical collapse today.

Brockelhurst, who, police report, has confessed to committing three murders and two dozen stick-ups since March 31, has fallen into a near-coma and a doctor had to be called to administer restoratives.

His pretty partner in crime, Bernice Felton, alternately slept or sobbed convulsively in her fourth-floor cell in the Dutchess County jail.

Police said they planned to leave the 23-year-old former Sunday school teacher and his companion alone with their "conscience" over the week-end pending a hearing on Monday.

Arrested by a suspicious state trooper, Brockelhurst amazed officers by telling them he had shot either from behind or without warning, an Illinois tailor, a Texas tavern owner, and Victor Gates, of Little Rock, Arkansas, in whose car they were riding when arrested.

Merrimack Rising; Areas Flooded

Concord, N. H., May 15—Swollen by heavy rains in the last 22 hours, the Merrimack river and tributaries of the Connecticut river were nearing flood level today.

One section of the city of Keene was without lights or electric power, as 2.11 inches of rain fell there. The Merrimack river was within two feet of flood level, rising three inches an hour, and already is overflowing low areas.

Emergency measures are being taken by the American Legion and other organized groups.

A three-inch rainfall in 36 hours was reported at Bristol. The Connecticut river had risen 18 inches at Springfield, as rain continued to fall.

Milkman Saves 4 At Chelsea Fire

A milkman, on his way to work, today aroused and rescued a mother and her three children when smoke from a fire in an adjoining unoccupied house on Auburn street, Chelsea, filled their home.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, started in the unocupied one-story brick dwelling at 145 Auburn street. The flames also spread to a storehouse of rags in the rear of the house.

Chester Galewski, the milkman, and also an Auburn street resident, saw the smoke pouring into the house of Mrs. Harriett Hogsloom at 151 Auburn street. He aided them to the street.

Lynn Fire Causes Hospital Scare

Two hundred patients in Lynn Hospital made ready to flee early today when fire destroyed a two-story barn of the Sheehan Construction Company, off Western avenue, Lynn.

Firemen responding to two alarms hurriedly put a crew of men on the hospital roof to extinguish the embers. A five-ton truck garaged in the barn was destroyed.

CHARGED WITH ROXBURY GIRL SLAYING

of the Warren avenue station last night and, according to police, was in company of the Foley girl a few hours before she met death by a shotgun blast in the ramshackle cottage of the caretaker.

Police said Zartha is on parole from a three years and a day sentence imposed on a charge of robbery in Middlesex superior court. He was released last August, police stated, and his parole does not expire until July.

Assistant District Attorney George W. Arbuckle told the court today that the state was still investigating certain phases of the case and made the request that Eyster be held without bail. Neither Eyster nor Zartha was represented by counsel.

Two ex-convicts, known companions of the girl in the South End, were also being hunted by Quincy police who enlisted the aid of detectives attached to the Warren avenue station.

ADMITS DRINKING

Police said Zarbber admitted he was drinking with the girl earlier Thursday night, but maintains he left her at 11:45 p. m., almost two hours before the shooting. He admitted also that two other men, the ex-convicts, were with the slain girl at that time according to police.

Despite Eyster's dramatic reenactment of the shooting at the scene yesterday while detectives looked on, investigators have been unable to clear up the one mystifying angle to the case; why the girl's hat and coat had been removed before she fell dead, her head shattered by the shotgun blast.

All of the versions of the shooting as described by Eyster have him firing the Browning automatic shotgun within seconds of the time the girl, whom he knew, appeared at the door of his cottage.

Police were also laboring to untangle what they term contradictory explanations and realities of the three shotgun shells found in the tiny three-room cottage.

EYSTER'S VERSION

According to Eyster's version the girl came to the cottage and rapped on the door, shouting:

"Open up the door, you know me."

Eyster states he opened the door and recognized the girl as the one he had known as "Bobby" and "Josie" who had come to his cottage the year before with two men. On that occasion the girl's companions slugged and robbed him of $35 and two revolvers.

Fearing she planned another robbery he warned her to get out. At that moment he saw a man approaching the cottage from the front and another peering in the window of the living room.

"I warned her to get out and began waving the gun I picked up at the men. All of a sudden it went off. She fell dead. I rau out of the house and chased the men. I fired twice at them."

Police found three shells in the house. One ejected from the automatic shotgun in the living room where the girl met her death and two others in a small hallway leading to the bedroom of the cottage.

Lieutenant George Fallon, Sergeant Fred Young and State Detective Michael Fleming, investigating the baffling case, stated they are not convinced as yet that the girl was accompanied to the Eyster cottage by men.

Investigators pointed out that police radio cars that arrived on the scene were unable to locate any trace of the automobile, or any tracks of automobile tires, of the car in which Eyster claims the girl's companions fled when he fired at them.

COLONIES' AID TO BRITAIN IN WAR PLEDGED

By KINGSBURY SMITH

(Copyright, 1937, by Intern'l News Service)

London, May 15—Definite promises to keep step with Britain's vast rearmament program to restore the might of the empire have been brought to the imperial conference by virtually all Dominion representatives, including Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada, International News Service learned today.

Most of the dominion representatives have informed Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that while they are reserving independence of judgment in the event of war, they are prepared to co-operate fully in strengthening the empire's far-flung defenses.

PLAN AIR BASES

The spirit of co-operation shown by the dominions in informal conversations held behind the scenes of the coronation festivities has led the British government to believe the way is now clear to make the Empire the most powerful political unit in the world today.

Britain has proposed that one of the first contributions the dominions should make toward empire armaments is establishment of powerful air bases in South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

It is understood the British also intend to sound out Premier King on the possibility of establishing a powerful air base on Canada's Pacific coast. The British are convinced they must show a stronger attitude in the Pacific to protect their interests in China.

MUNITIONS PLANS

In line with Britain's plan for unified empire defense, the question of the Dominions becoming potential munition manufacturers in order to assure a plentiful British supply in war-time also will be discussed.

Britain further intends to seek more cooperation from the Dominions in provisioning and defense of British naval bases throughout the empire. The defense policy to which Britain wants the Dominions to agree calls for drafting a plan of action outlining a clear division of functions for each Dominion, especially as to how they would use their fighting forces, should the empire become involved in war.

It was admitted in official quarters numerous difficulties must be ironed out before agreement to this policy can be attained.

WIFE AT BEDSIDE

Mrs. Feeney and Pedonti were at the bedside when death came.

The latter declared that the lawyer had complained of illness ever since their departure from Cuba.

He said that Feeney's condition became so serious at noon yesterday that his removel to the hospital was deemed imperative.

Feeney resided in Melville avenue, Dorchester.

Feeney was born 64 years ago in Boston. He left school when he was 14 and went to work as a leather finisher. He attended the Boston University Law School and was admitted to the bar in 1894.

When he was twenty-four, Feeney was elected mayor of Woburn, served as chairman of the Democratic State Committee and was solicitor at Woburn until 1904 when he entered practice as a defense lawyer.

In 1920 he was made assistant district attorney of Suffolk County.

Attorney Feeney's long practice in Massachusetts courts was featured by his many spectacular victories in seemingly lost causes.

IN FAMOUS TRIALS

He figured as defense counsel in some of the Commonwealth's most famous murder trials and criminal prosecutions.

With Clarence Darrow, the late William J. Fallon of New York and Edward J. Reilly, case attorney, Feeney ranked as among America's foremost special pleaders.

Former Governor Curley said today:

"The announcement of the death of John P. Feeney comes as a genuine shock. He was beloved by everyone. He was an outstanding and outspoken citizen and leader of the bar. His passin? is a severe loss to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which he loved, and in the courts of which he served with such distinction and honor.

Viscount Snowden Dies Suddenly

London, May 15 (AP)—Philip Snowden, first Viscount of Ickornshaw, former chancellor of the exchequer and a guiding spirit of the British labor movement, died suddenly today of a heart attack.

The Socialist peer was 72 years old.

The Viscount, who overcame invalidism to rise from obscurity in Lancashire and twice hold the purse strings of the British empire, died at 4 a. m. at his country home, Tilford, Surrey.

He had been confined there for some time in ill health. His widow, the Viscountess Snowden, explained on the day before the coronation of King George VI that Lord Snowden was not well enough to attend.

His illness, however, apparently had not seemed critical, for Viscountess Snowden was present and was a guest last night at a State ball at Buckingham Palace.

U. S. JUDGES MAY LOSE LIFE TENURE

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, May 15 (INS)—A constitutional amendment, taking the life tenure of officef rom federal district judges, was being considered today by members of the Senate judiciary committee as a judicial reform distinct from President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan.

The issue may be raised when the committee resumes its sessions Monday. There was a hint, though, that action on it would be postponed until after the Senate reaches a decision on the high court plan.

The movedeveloped from senatorial dissatisfaction with the way some federal judges conduct their courts and general reluctance on Capitol Hill to impeach jurists. Democratic committeewoman, and Mrs. Margaret temtieoman,w mcice oD and etaoin etao etaoin etaoishr

A number of senate committees in recent years have investigated the district court system, found fault with the conduct of judges but found themselves powerless to remedy the situation since the judges were not removable except by impeachment.

Meanwhile, Roosevelt went ahead with pleas for reform of the Supreme Court after demanding a showdown and rejecting all hints of pompromise. Senator Joseph T. Robsinson planned to proceed along these lines, admitting the vote in the senate "would be close with a fair prospect of passing."

Garden Suffers First Legal Defeat | Louis, Braddock Will Draw Million

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

Federal Judge Guy L. Fake ended the New York Garden's monopoly of heavyweight championship boxing matches when he denied the injunction which would have prevented Jimmy Braddock from defending his world title against the deadly punches of "Bomber" Joe Louis in Chicago on June 22.

The Garden has controlled the heavyweight championship since the days of Tex Rickard. It earned millions of dollars from the promotion of heavyweight bouts during the golden days of Dempsey, Tunney and Sharkey.

The Garden perpetuated its domination of the heavyweight picture by insisting that every challenger sign to defend his title for the House that Tex Built in the event he won.

In the past every test to break the Garden contracts in court have failed. It was not until the present case came before the Federal District Court in New Jersey that any boxer has been able to defeat the Garden at law.

Braddock signed a contract to defend his title for the Garden before his winning contest with Max Baer. That was two years ago, and Braddock contends that things have occurred since the signing of that contract that make it unnecessary for him to comply with its terms.

* * *

MIKE JACOBS FISTIC KING

THE DECISION of the Federal Judge makes Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Club and old time pal of Tex Rickard, king of boxing. With Joe Louis as his ace attraction, Mike has secured control of the heavyweight division.

Jimmy Braddock is as anxious to box under Jacobs' direction as are other leading heavyweights. He knows he will get more money fighting Louis than he will battling any other heavyweight, and he is anxious to cash in while the cashing is good.

Braddock has been a child of fortune in winning his way to the loftiest perch in the heavyweight roost. He came up off a welfare roll to conquer Max Baer.

Last year Fate frowned on him when an attack of arthritis made it impossible for him to meet Max Schmeling in September. Then he turned his attention toward Joe Louis, even though he was faced by legal tangles. The decision of the Federal judge in New Jersey removes the last obstacle in Braddock's path to financial security.

Chicago is the right spot for the Louis-Braddock bout. It will draw more money there than it would in New York or in any other city.

There has not been a heavyweight championship bout in Chicago since Gene Tunney successfully defended his title against Jack Dempsey in the ring in Soldier Field in September, 1927.

That bout drew a record gate of $2,600,000. Tunney

The 85-year-old veteran crew coach, as alert and alive to rowing as ever, tells the folks how the Orange varsity expects to beat Harvard, Cornell and M. I. T. this afternoon.

GROVE

IN CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., May 15—Lefty Grove has been nominated by Manager Joe Cronin to twirl the first game against the Senators here this afternoon. Pete Appleton (nee Jablonsky) was the home side's choice.

A second game will be played tomorrow, after which the Hose will return to Boston for a long home stand.

The club made a useless trip way down to Hazleton, Pa., for a game with their farm hands which was rained out.

However, Manager Specs Toporcer, former St. Louis Card, brought joy to the club officials when he announced that Red Daughters and Art Mahan, Boston boys with Hazelton, were going great guns.

Another Greater Boston boy, Walter Riplay of Mansfield, Mass., has been bothered with a severe cold and Toporcer sent him to Danville, Va., where the warmer climate might benefit him.

H. C. Scared

Worcester, May 15—Undefeated Holy Cross got a score here when Villanova was leading, 4-2, in the fifth inning as the Crusaders came to bat. But rain came and saved the Crusaders' life.

Dartmouth Picked In Harvard Meet

Favored to win its first dual meet over Harvard since 1911, the Dartmouth track team will invade the Harvard Stadium here this afternoon.

Dartmouth, on paper, appears to be a cinch over the Crimson, but an upset here and there may make it close.

The biggest Green threat is expected in the hurdle events, with Jack Donovan and Bill Watson favored to run one, two in these events.

Johnny Hoffsteter of Dartmouth is the popular choice to win the quarter mile event, with Pat Gorman, sensation of the Heptagonal games, a cinch to take top honors in the half.

Stewart Whitman, who ran second to Howie Welch of Cornell in the Hep meet, will be the man Harvard will have to beat in the mile, but the Crimson should score heavily in the two mile with Bill Wright, a newcomer.

Tony Geniawicz, a Lynn boy, should have little trouble winning the shot put for Dartmouth, while Ulysses Wharton should take the pole vault.

Harvard's chances rest on Captain Schmidt scoring an upset in the hurdles. The Crimson has a good chance in the sprints which have already been consigned to Johnny Johnson of Dartmouth.

If Al Northrop has recovered from his illness he will be a threat in the mile, and Henry Marcy should get into the point scoring in the two mile.

HARVARD,

Tech, Henley

FAVORITES

Princeton, N. J., May 15—M. I. T. and Harvard, rated as favorites today as the varsity 150-pound crews from eight colleges, meet in the American Henley races over the mile and five-sixteenths course on Lake Carnegie.

Also entered in the raes are Cornell, Yale, Princeton, Manhattan, Columbia and Penn.

Tech holds the record for the course over which the lightweights will race. The Engineer eight, in the first race of the season, outstroked Princeton to set the course figures.

Olson Threatens Bartush's Leg

If Billy Bartush, Chicago Hercules, gets caught in Cliff Olson's dreaded leg-lock in the headline bout of Promoter Ed Quinn's mat show in Mechanics Building Tuesday night, the powerful Minnesota heavyweight threatens to break Billy's leg if he refuses to surrender.

No less than five major heavyweights in the country, including Champion Yvon Robert, suffered broken legs in bouts with the leg-lock master because they refused to quit.

UnbeatenHarvard Quad Regatta Favorite

Harvard's undefeated armada sails forth again today to combat Syracuse, Cornell and M. I. T. on the Charles River Basin over the mile and three-quarters route.

In varsity, junior varsity and freshman races, the Crimson sweepswingers will be protecting an unsmirched record—a record unmatched in many years of Harvard rowing—ten consecutive victories in as many races.

The Harvard varsity has won the Compton and Rowe Cups, and has beaten Princeton, M. I. T., Rutgers and Columbia.

Jim Chace, the Crimson stroke oar, who has set the heart killing beat that ruined all of Harvard's would-be "scuttlers," will be at the all-important No. 8 slide once again.

In the stroke slide for Jim Ten Eyck's Syracuse crew will be Captain Sterling Bettinger. He is, at 160 pounds, the lightest stroke oar of a major varsity eight.

Harvard is the crew to beat.

Harvard has already punctured the shell of Princeton, an eight which has outdistanced Syrpcuse once this year.

But Syracuse was short of work then, due to a late start on Lake Onondaga. Today it should be a vastly improved crew.

So 'tis with the jayvee jaunt.

In the freshman race, Syracuse and Tech are dangerous. Pat Manning, new Tech freshman coach, has a fine leg driving crew which lost to Harvard's eight by a length a week ago after going off the course.

Along the banks of the Charles, thousands of Harvard grads will watch Captain Ed Bennett as he steers the Harvard shell along its course.

It will be a last "look" for local crew followers at the eight which will brush it out next month with Ed Leader's Yale oarsmen.

Baer Sued Again

New York, May 16—Madison Square Garden Corporation has instituted suit against Max Baer and Ancil Hoffman for $22,000 damages, charging the pair broke an agreement under which Baer was to have met Bob Pastor in the Garden last March 19.

Dizzy Shellacked By Pirates

Pittsburgh, May 15 (US)—Dizzy Dean, the great St. Louis righthander, was just another pitcher to the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates as they trounced the Cardinals, 11 to 4.

Starting the game with a five-game winning streak and a record of yielding only two earned runs in 45 innings of pitching, Dizzy was driven to the showers in the fourth inning and was later charged with his first setback of the season.

The Pirates hammered Dean and three other Cardinal hurlers for a total of 20 hits, including four each for Paul Waner and Woody Jensen, and three apiece for Arky Vaughan and Al Todd. Waner drove in five runs with four singles.

The Cardinals collected 12 hits off Red Lucas and Mace Brown, Ducky Medwick and Terry Moore getting four apiece and Johnny Mize three. Medwick included a home run among his safeties.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

ANN MARSTERS

Ann Marsters, girl handicapper, today picked LONE HAND to win the sixth race at Narragansett Park, and BRIGHT BIRD to win the seventh.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS

$2 Win, Lone Hand, Narragansett 6th.

$2 Win, Bright Bird, Narragansett 7th.

BANKROLL $476.00. DAY'S PLAY $4.

Miss Marsters will make a wager of $2 on each of her selections to win.

Miss Marsters is conducting a novel experiment to see if it is possible to beat the races if one is conservative and bets on only two horses each day.

Walter O'Hara has given Miss Marsters $1000, under the terms of which $500 has already been turned over to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The other $500 is being used as a betting stake, and the balance will be given to the Basket Fund at the end of the experiment.

Dornoch, in Second, Wilson's Best of Day

LITTLE MIRACLE $5000 CAP FAVORITE

PRESSED WHOPPER LAST OUT

By DAVE WILSON

(Selections for fast track)

BEST BET—DORNOCH, 2ND RACE

Narragansett Park, May 15—Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Little Miracle, with a postage stamp of 106 pounds up, looms all over a winner in the $5000 added Governor's Handicap, mile and a furlong feature here today.

Little Miracle, in her last outing at Jamaica, came from out of the clouds to finish a fast-going second to Whopper in the six furlongs of the $5000 added Jamaica Handicap. Previously, she had drubbed Sgt. Byrne and others over the same route.

FIRST—Gallic, Al's Pride, Clarify

Idle since Hialeah Park, GALLIC needs only to duplicate brisk morning trials to insure brackets. The C. A. Hanson colorbearer, in my book, outclasses this cheap field. Four panels in .49 very handily went as a final. AL'S PRIDE, fourth to Loloma, Prince Pompey and Lanier in last race, shapes up slightly better than CLARIFY in the fight for place honors. The latter was a top-notch stake performers a few years back. However, he will have to display marked improvement over dull Texas form to head the top pair.

SECOND—Dornoch, Queen Vic, Linlace

DORNOCH shapes up as the most probable winner in the day's sport. This veteran was $79.80-to-1 in his last start, but against better opposition. The L. E. Hanson colorbearer forced a dazzling pace that day until well into the homestretch, when his lack of racing condition told and he was taken in hand to finish far back among the also-rans. With expected improvement, he should experience little difficulty in turning back this weak field. Contention, if any, may be furnished by QUEEN VIC. The latter finished dead last in her most recent competitive essay, but she was a creditable fourth in front of that LINLACE, well up in recent starts, for the remainder.

THIRD—St. Moritz, Fair Time, Nigrette

ST. MORITZ, a fresh horse, just failed to outlast Die Hard in a swiftly-run six furlongs dash the other day. With five less pounds to carry, it is impossible to go past Mrs. A. Schwartz's Plater in searching for the winner. FAIR TIME was forced to take up when Jester B. wheeled in front of him the other day, but he closed a big gap to finish sixth in a field of 12. May prove dangerous with clear sailing. NIGRETTE flashed good speed in placing to Harp o' Gold in her last race. Figures say this filly should be difficult to head for the balance.

FOURTH—Guy Fawkes, Good Catch, Golden Thought

GUY FAWKES picked up 114 pounds and stepped six furlongs in 1:11 1-5—one of the fastest races of the meeting—to win eased up by six full lengths from Patrolite, Crow's Flight and others in his lone appearance in this sector. Lyman Bruise's charge shoulders the top impost of 122 pounds in this number, but on performance he figures to make the accounting in easy fashion. GOOD CATCH drugged Natty Boy and others in 1:12 2-5 the other day; he gets 12 pounds in actual weight from the top selection and will have a mighty capable running mate in Crow's Nest. GOLDEN THOUGHT, dead short in last race, may improve enough to show.

FIFTH—Little Miracle, Araho Entry, Columbiana

LITTLE MIRACLE will have a mighty tough nut to crack in the Araho Entry MUCHO GUSTO and NEW DEAL. This pair finished noses apart in King Philip Handicap. However, I don't believe either is capable of drubbing the top selection under the weight arrangements. COLUMBIANA has been going great guns in morning trials since arriving in this sector. Will be a mighty dangerous mare if she runs back to her winning performance last winter in the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup.

SIXTH—Ace of Spades, High Diver, Black Nose

Shooting for a price and expect to get it if ACE OF SPADES races back to top winter form. This plater has been idle since the recent Oaklawn Park meeting, but brisk trials indicate that he is ready to win at the first asking. HIGH DIVER raced improved to finish third to Building Trades and Pompous Genie in his last race. He easily holds the best local form. BLACK NOSE was pitted too ambitiously in his New England debut. Texas form says he should be troublesome.

SEVENTH—Bright Bird, Adamite, Pretty Russell

Barring poor racing luck, BRIGHT BIRD should easily atone for last Thursday's defeat. The haymaker suffered interference at the break and was unable to get his usual position on the lead. He was beaten less than a length by Our Bud, Caleb and Coltman for all the money. ADAMITE finished fifth in the same race, but was beaten two full lengths by the top selection. PRETTY RUSSELL will be dangerous only in the event of rain. The daughter of Victorian is a three-star mudder in my book.

EIGHTH—Noah's Pride, Our Bud, Anhelation

NOAH'S PRIDE, well-tightened in sprint races, should take the track and lead from end to end in this cheap route affair. Past records atest to route ability. OUR BUD came from out of the clouds to beat Caleb and others in Thursday's nightcap. On performance, he looks like the solid horse. ANHELATION couldn't raise a respectable gallops in his last race. In front of that, however, he just missed drubbing King Bonny.

PICKS POMPOON OVER WAR ADMIRAL

Baltimore, May 15 (AP)—A siege of rain, which turned Pimlico's track into a guagmire, lifted hours before the Preakness today, and sunshine filtered throught the breaking clouds. The weather was cool and brisk and gave indications that, if rain held of throughout the afternoon, the Maryland racing classic would draw a sizeable crowd.

By BILL CORUM

New York, May 15—Since I am unable to be in Baltimore today for the running of the famous old Preakness stakes over the hilltop course at Pimlico, I shall be obliged to guess the race with my unusual uncanny accuracy from this distance.

Not that the miles mean anything to a handcipapper of my proved ability. Noses, heads and lengths don't. Why should miles?

As my pal Jack Fitzgerald, possibly the greatest of the handicappers and surely one of the most popular members of the racing fraternity, wired me: "Be sure and pick either War Admiral or Pompoon in the Preakness, as I want to back the former on a fast track and the latter if it comes up mud."

Well, as nearly as I can determine from a horizontal angle, it will be mud at Pimlico today, and so, just in the hope of knocking the favorite down, I'm picking Pompoon.

There are several angles that might lead one to think that the powerful son of Pompey could turn the tables on the little Admiral today.

The most important of these is that Pompoon is a proved mud runner. Ninety Man O'Wars out of a hundred can run in off footing, but it is wholly possible that War Admiral is the exception to the rule.

Mud in Face

Not a sure thing, mind you, but possible. One of the defeats the fleet Man O'War colt suffered as a two-year-old was administered by Bottle Cap on a muddy track.

Further than that, it always has been the writer's idea that running on a muddy track was not half as much a matter of breeding as of stride and the size of the hoof.

As a general rule, I believe small horses with a short, choppy stride can best negotiate off-footing. But, while War Admiral is small, he seems to glide along close to the ground when in motion. So it is conceivable that mud would be a handicap.

Another thing is that some horses refuse to do their best with dirt and mud hitting them in the face, and it is not in the law of averages that the salty Admiral can always go to the top at the drop of the flag.

Earle Sande told me on the way home from Louisville that all the trainers and riders around Louisville last week had been assured that War Admiral wouldn't run a mile and two furlongs under stake weight.

This, Sande thought, made a difference in "Lighthorse Harry" Richards' ride on Pompoon.

He figured Richards might have made his bid earlier if he hadn't been so confident he could go to the flying brown son of Man O'War in the run through the stretch.

Sande didn't believe these tactics might have altered the result, but felt it was conceivable that they might have.

In today's 47th running of the Preakness, Richards will not have a leg up on the hard-hitting son of Pompey.

While he rides Walter Jeffords' Matey, "Cowboy Wayne" Wright will be seeing if he can get any closer to War Admiral with Pompoon in the Preakness than he did with Heelfly in the Derby.

It will be "the cowboy's" last roundup against War Admiral, since if he can't rope him today, he isn't ever likely to do it.

Nor is any other jockey in these parts on any other three-year-old. For if War Tdmiral can prove this afternoon that he can mud as his daddy did, then there is nothing between him and a clean sweep of the rich three-year-old stakes.

Admiral Third

He has proved he can carry his weight. He has proved he can go the route. He has proved he can make his own pace and still have plenty in reserve at the finish.

If he can prove today that he can mud and repeat the triumph the golden stallion, his sire, scored in the Preakness in 1920, then who can possibly deny his claim to the three-year-old championship?

Born to buck the chalk, however, and forever trying to find something with which to upset the choice, we hereby pick the 47th Preakness as follows, and call it a day:

1—Pompoon.

2—Jewell Dorsett.

3—War Admiral.

4—Mosawtre.

Nurse, will you take my pulse again? I just want to find out if picking that race one-two-three-four has upset me.

Dave Wilson Picks War Admiral in Preakness

By DAVE WILSON

Pawtucket, R. I., May 15—It's War Admiral to win the historic Preakness at Pimlico today.

Mud or dry, I'm stringing along with the gallant son of a famous sire, War Admiral, winner of the Kentucky Derby last weekend.

There were those who said War Admiral couldn't run over a distance of ground. He disproved that theory in handsome fashion by toywalking with his field in the Churchill Downs classic.

Now the so-called smart gentry are saying on the eve of the Preakness that War Admiral can't stand up in the mud.

All great thoroughbreds can run whether the track is mud or dry. And War Admiral has shown that he is a champion.

Jerry Louchheim's Pompoon is the contention in the race, if any. The Pompey colt showed he can go over a route, and his breeding indicates he will move up in a mud strip.

Merrymaker, Willie Shea's trained star, stands a royal chance to get in the money. Shea has been hoping for a muddy track. If this should loom, then Merrymaker can't be overlooked.

Today

Dover Site Of Horse Treat

More than 10,000 horse lovers will gather in Dover today for the second Ard Righ Horse Show and Festival, which is being staged for the benefit of Sacred Heart Parish of Newton Center, on the estate of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly.

With over 100 outstanding horse show exhibitors from all parts of the state, as well as Rhode Island and Long Island, sharing in the competition, today's Ard Righ event promises to be New England's largest one-day show of the season.

Statler Trophy

Among other prominent stables will be those of Mrs. William H. Danforth, of Boston; Public Works Commissioner and Mrs. William J. Callahan, of Waban; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Burkard, of Arlington; Miss Phyllis Gerry, of Providence; William J. O'Sullivan, of Lincoln, and the Ard Righ Stable, owned by Edward and John Donnelly.

Valuable trophies will be awarded the winners of various classes, with competition being especially keen in the ladies' hunter class for the new Hotel Statler Trophy.

While the horse show will occupy the center of interest, there will also be skeet and rifle shooting, archery, a puppet show and a band concert. The grounds will be illuminated at night, when a festival will be staged.

Among the prominent juvenile riders who wil participate will be the Misses Elise and Ursula Burkard, riding their saddle horses, Billy Lightfoot, Lela Owen and Midnight Sun; Richard Sawyer, of Framingham, whose all-round riding at the recent Bear Hill show enabled him to retain possession of the Helen A. Balfour Challenge Trophy; Miss Jane Callahan, and Daniel, Francis and Katherine O'Sullivan.

Lovesy Boss

Several riders from the Jacobs Hill Hunt of Providence will participate, as well as horsemen from Worcester, Framingham, Braintree, Plymouth, Lexington, Wellesley, Quincy, South Natick, Swampscott and Dedham.

Allen J. Wilson is chairman of the show committee. William Almy, Jr., will judge the hunters and jumpers, and Murray Wilder will rank the saddle horses and riding competitions. Arthur H. Lovesy is manager and ringmaster.

Katherine Sullivan, riding Dough Boy, Bear Hill winner, is one of the most prominent entries in the Ladies' Hunter Class at the Ard Righ horse show at Dover today.

Dorothy Storer jumping Baralma has the blue ribbon in the Ladies' Hunters as her goal in the Ard Righ show at the Dover estate of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly this afternoon.

Miss Phyllis Gerry is not only pretty but a most capable horsewoman. She's up on Sandomar at the Ard Righ show, in aid of the Sacred Heart Church, Newton, at Dover today.

BEES To Get Skull DRILLS

LOSSES DUE TO DUMB PLAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Will McKechnie, who ought to know something about it, doesn't agree with the majority on the cause of the Bees' slump.

Weak hitting in most instances and erratic pitching on other occasions have been blamed for the seven straight defeats now plaguing the Swarm.

But Boss Bill opines that lack of baseball sense and intuition has been the team's most fatal weakness.

"What we need more than a stronger punch and steadier pitching is keener and quicker thinking," he asserted today as he made plans for the opening of an abbreviated two-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"Several of our defeats could have been turned into victories if we had shown better defensive judgment.

"There's been too much indecision as to who should field certain balls; too much throwing to the wrong sacks.

Fette, Turner

This is something brand new among McKechnie problems.

The Canny Scot has had his share of mediocre teams but none of his outfits was ever before accused of being slow-witted.

In fact, the strongest asset of most of his Boston clubs has been the knack of playing heads-up baseball.

This 1937 outfit, too, will eventually win more games by brains than by brawn, for McKechnie, as patient as he is, will not stand for errors of omission.

Mechanical failures he'll overlook, but a player who doesn't play according to Hoyle isn't permitted to play any other way for the Bees' boss very long.

Except for grey matter, the team has come up to McKechnie's expectations during the first month of campaigning.

Ask him who's the best of the lot, and he'll answer Lou Fette and Jim Turner.

"Fette for a long route, Turner for a short spell," he explains.

"I don't mean that Turner can't go the distance. He can. And Fette is O. K. for relief.

"What I mean is that Fette looks the more impressive going full way and Turner shapes up as the better bet to get us out of trouble in any one inning."

Right next to these two, Bill rates Ira Hutchinson. He says he wouldn't be surprised if "Hutch" proved to be the best of the lot before the race is over.

"I've been using Ira sparingly because he's young in both age and experience.

"It's always a good idea to let a pitcher like that sit on the bench and study the batters during the first series with every club.

"Now that he's seen all our rivals, he'll do his share of starting and, I predict, win plenty of games."

Garms Set

Our home run king could play today if necessary, but the finger he broke in the opening game of the season is still numb and swollen. So, unless an emergency arises, he won't be called upon to do more than pinch-hit until the digit is entirely healed.

Debs Garms will be given a thorough trial at third base. He's shown he can hit well enough.

He has some things to learn about guarding the hot corner, but McKechnie is confident he'll pick them up and fill the berth creditably.

Lou Fette, who had been slated to hurl Friday's weather-wrecked opener against the Dodgers, is first choice to work today, but McKechnie reserves the right to shift to Danny MacFayden.

Burleigh Grimes, who is actually smiling over the way his Dodgers have been traveling of late, is still sticking to Van Lingle Mungo as his hill choice.

Sides Most Serious Threat To Turnesa in College Golf

CONSISTENTLY IN LOW 70'S

By BILL GRIMES

Little Willie Turnesa, smooth swinging Holy Cross junior, is defending his New England Intercollegiate title today at Oakley Country Club against the largest and fastest field that has ever competed in this championship.

Although neither Yale nor Williams was represented, the field for the qualifying round exceeded even the most optimistic predictions, for there were 106 players in action.

Because of the large field, the committee, comprising Pres. Clarence P. Houstan, Tufts; Vice-Pres. Al McCoy, Colby; Robert B. Miller, Bowdoin; John Curley, Boston College; Ben Beck, Middlebury, and Clark Hodder, Harvard, changed the original plans, concerning the number of qualifiers by voting an increase from 30 to 49, which figure was reached by allowing the 82's to remain in the championship flight.

49 in Field

"I felt that by restricting the qualifiers to the low thirty," declared Pres. Houstan "that we were not giving the boys a fair break, especially in view of the fact that they qualified over the 18 hole route.

"To hold to our original plans would be dangerous to the future New England Intercollegiate championships.

"I believe that the New England is the major college championship of this section and, with more than one hundred entries, it's unfair to qualify only about 25 per cent of the field."

So, instead of a field of only 30, there are 48 collegians battling to strip Willie Turnesa of the title he took from Lynford Lardner, Jr., Harvard, a year ago.

Turnesa finished eighth in the qualifying round with a 75, which is a fine indication of the ability of the field.

WILLIE TURNESA
Defends N. E. College Title

Bob Sides, Harvard, Dave Walsh, Dartmouth, and George Hafeli, Holy Cross, tied for the medal with 73s, while Gerry Anderson, Holy Cross, the former state caddy and junior champion, and three representatives of the Big Green, Dick Heneage, R. C. Wright and Bobby Jacobson, posted 74's.

Dave "Harpo" Walsh, who hails from Walpole, and who was well known in the junior ranks a few years ago, and R. C. Wright, a Jerseyite, are sophomores at Dartmouth and are making their debut with the Big Green as golfers.

In fact, Walsh and Wright engaged in a play off with six other upper classmen for the fifth and sixth varsity berths.

After making the grade in a play off, Walsh and Wright lost no time displaying their ability under championship pressure by carding 73 and 74, respectively.

Walsh and Wright are fortified with as good short games as any player in the field. Walsh has plenty of distance off the tees and through the fairgreens and is deadly from 50 yards off the greens.

Wright is not long, but Oakley is built for his game, and he'll bear watching today, as will "Harpo," who is a great competitor in all branches of sport.

WALSH, WRIGHT GREEN STARS

Sides has been scoring in the low 70's for a fortnight. He was 70 during his pre-qualifying round and turned in a 73 at Belmont early this week.

After the first two holes yesterday, Sides was as steady as a machine, making only two slips, a slightly pulled tee shot at the fifth and under-clubbing himself at the 14th.

Mr. Sides may bring the New England title back to Harvard.

Besides Walsh and Wright, Dartmouth has two other serious contenders for the top honors, Dick Heneage and Bobby Jacobson.

But before the fourth New England intercollegiate championship is awarded to anyone, Anderson and Hafeli, two Holy Cross sophomores, must be considered.

With the possible exception of Turnesa, Anderson has had more championship experience than any player in the field.

For two consecutive years, he held the state caddy title, a feat only accomplished once before and he was the state Junior titlist in 1935.

Other Threats

On his showing yesterday, Anderson is playing the best golf of his career.

Hafeli, who comes from Peterboro, N. H., is a terrific hitter and packs a sound all around game. He was struggling yesterday during the out nine and used up 39 strokes, but he steadied down and raced home in 34 for his 73.

Among the other contenders who'll be dangerous today are Charlie Round, Brown; L. A. McGowan, Harvard; Dick Neilson; Middlebury, "Jigger" Statz, Holy Cross; George Enos, Harvard, and Lou Wyman, New Hampshire.

The championship is being decided over the 36-hole route. In conjunction with the first round this morning, Dartmouth is playing a team match with Harvard, which team takes on Brown this afternoon.

Crimson-Green Game Postponed

Wet grounds forced the postponement of the Harvard-Dartmouth game scheduled to be played at Hanover, N. H. this afternoon. It will be played at Soldiers Field, June 10 as part of a double header.

The Harvard-Yale Freshman game at Soldiers Field today is off and will be played Monday.

Dean Academy and Harvard Junior Varsity baseball teams will have to wait until a later date to settle their superiority on the diamond.

Inclement weather however does not feaze the crew and track men as their contests will go on as scheduled.

Bing Crosby Horse Winner

Agua Caliente, Mex., May 15 (AP)—The colors of Bing Crosby, film and radio singer, flew high at Agua Caliente's race track today with a victory by San Dieguito making it four straight triumphs for his stable.

The two-year-old filly won yesterday's feature race, a 4½ furlong sprint, in 55¼ seconds. She paid $11, $5.80 and $4.80.

Ard Righ Show Attracts 10,000

Ride At Ard Righ Show Today

Dover Site Of Horse Treat

More than 10,000 horse lovers will gather in Dover today for the second Ard Righ Horse Show and Festival, which is being staged for the benefit of Sacred Heart Parish of Newton Center, on the estate of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly.

With over 100 outstanding horse show exhibitors from all parts of the state, as well as Rhode Island and Long Island, sharing in the competition, today's Ard Righ event promises to be New England's largest one-day show of the season.

Statler Trophy

Among other prominent stables will be those of Mrs. William H. Danforth, of Boston; Public Works Commissioner and Mrs. William J. Callahan, of Waban; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Burkard, of Arlington; Miss Phyllis Gerry, of Providence; William J. O'Sullivan, of Lincoln, and the Ard Righ Stable, owned by Edward and John Donnelly.

Valuable trophies will be awarded the winners of various classes, with competition being especially keen in the ladies' hunter class for the new Hotel Statler Trophy.

While the horse show will occupy the center of interest, there will also be skeet and rifle shooting, archery, a puppet show and a band concert. The grounds will be illuminated at night, when a festival will be staged.

Among the prominent juvenile riders who wil participate will be the Misses Elise and Ursula Burkard, riding their saddle horses, Billy Lightfoot, Lela Owen and Midnight Sun; Richard Sawyer, of Framingham, whose all-round riding at the recent Bear Hill show enabled him to retain possession of the Helen A. Balfour Challenge Trophy; Miss Jane Callahan, and Daniel, Francis and Katherine O'Sullivan.

Lovesy Boss

Several riders from the Jacobs Hill Hunt of Providence will participate, as well as horsemen from Worcester, Framingham, Braintree, Plymouth, Lexington, Wellesley, Quincy, South Natick, Swampscott and Dedham.

Allen J. Wilson is chairman of the show committee. William Almy, Jr., will judge the hunters and jumpers, and Murray Wilder will rank the saddle horses and riding competitions. Arthur H. Lovesy is manager and ringmaster.

Katherine Sullivan, riding Dough Boy, Bear Hill winner, is one of the most prominent entries in the Ladies' Hunter Class at the Ard Righ horse show at Dover today.

Dorothy Storer jumping Baralma has the blue ribbon in the Ladies' Hunters as her goal in the Ard Righ show at the Dover estate of Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly this afternoon.

Miss Phyllis Gerry is not only pretty but a most capable horsewoman. She's up on Sandomar at the Ard Righ show, in aid of the Sacred Heart Church, Newton, at Dover today.

BEES To Get Skull DRILLS

LOSSES DUE TO DUMB PLAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Will McKechnie, who ought to know something about it, doesn't agree with the majority on the cause of the Bees' slump.

Weak hitting in most instances and erratic pitching on other occasions have been blamed for the seven straight defeats now plaguing the Swarm.

But Boss Bill opines that lack of baseball sense and intuition has been the team's most fatal weakness.

"What we need more than a stronger punch and steadier pitching is keener and quicker thinking," he asserted today as he made plans for the opening of an abbreviated two-game series with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"Several of our defeats could have been turned into victories if we had shown better defensive judgment.

"There's been too much indecision as to who should field certain balls; too much throwing to the wrong sacks.

Fette, Turner

This is something brand new among McKechnie problems.

The Canny Scot has had his share of mediocre teams but none of his outfits was ever before accused of being slow-witted.

In fact, the strongest asset of most of his Boston clubs has been the knack of playing heads-up baseball.

This 1937 outfit, too, will eventually win more games by brains than by brawn, for McKechnie, as patient as he is, will not stand for errors of omission.

Mechanical failures he'll overlook, but a player who doesn't play according to Hoyle isn't permitted to play any other way for the Bees' boss very long.

Except for grey matter, the team has come up to McKechnie's expectations during the first month of campaigning.

Ask him who's the best of the lot, and he'll answer Lou Fette and Jim Turner.

"Fette for a long route, Turner for a short spell," he explains.

"I don't mean that Turner can't go the distance. He can. And Fette is O. K. for relief.

"What I mean is that Fette looks the more impressive going full way and Turner shapes up as the better bet to get us out of trouble in any one inning."

Right next to these two, Bill rates Ira Hutchinson. He says he wouldn't be surprised if "Hutch" proved to be the best of the lot before the race is over.

"I've been using Ira sparingly because he's young in both age and experience.

"It's always a good idea to let a pitcher like that sit on the bench and study the batters during the first series with every club.

"Now that he's seen all our rivals, he'll do his share of starting and, I predict, win plenty of games."

Garms Set

Our home run king could play today if necessary, but the finger he broke in the opening game of the season is still numb and swollen. So, unless an emergency arises, he won't be called upon to do more than pinch-hit until the digit is entirely healed.

Debs Garms will be given a thorough trial at third base. He's shown he can hit well enough.

He has some things to learn about guarding the hot corner, but McKechnie is confident he'll pick them up and fill the berth creditably.

Lou Fette, who had been slated to hurl Friday's weather-wrecked opener against the Dodgers, is first choice to work today, but McKechnie reserves the right to shift to Danny MacFayden.

Burleigh Grimes, who is actually smiling over the way his Dodgers have been traveling of late, is still sticking to Van Lingle Mungo as his hill choice.

Sides Most Serious Threat To Turnesa in College Golf

CONSISTENTLY IN LOW 70'S

By BILL GRIMES

Little Willie Turnesa, smooth swinging Holy Cross junior, is defending his New England Intercollegiate title today at Oakley Country Club against the largest and fastest field that has ever competed in this championship.

Although neither Yale nor Williams was represented, the field for the qualifying round exceeded even the most optimistic predictions, for there were 106 players in action.

Because of the large field, the committee, comprising Pres. Clarence P. Houstan, Tufts; Vice-Pres. Al McCoy, Colby; Robert B. Miller, Bowdoin; John Curley, Boston College; Ben Beck, Middlebury, and Clark Hodder, Harvard, changed the original plans, concerning the number of qualifiers by voting an increase from 30 to 49, which figure was reached by allowing the 82's to remain in the championship flight.

49 in Field

"I felt that by restricting the qualifiers to the low thirty," declared Pres. Houstan "that we were not giving the boys a fair break, especially in view of the fact that they qualified over the 18 hole route.

"To hold to our original plans would be dangerous to the future New England Intercollegiate championships.

"I believe that the New England is the major college championship of this section and, with more than one hundred entries, it's unfair to qualify only about 25 per cent of the field."

So, instead of a field of only 30, there are 48 collegians battling to strip Willie Turnesa of the title he took from Lynford Lardner, Jr., Harvard, a year ago.

WILLIE TURNESA
Defends N. E. College Title

Turnesa finished eighth in the qualifying round with a 75, which is a fine indication of the ability of the field.

Bob Sides, Harvard, Dave Walsh, Dartmouth, and George Hafeli, Holy Cross, tied for the medal with 73s, while Gerry Anderson, Holy Cross, the former state caddy and junior champion, and three representatives of the Big Green, Dick Heneage, R. C. Wright and Bobby Jacobson, posted 74's.

Dave "Harpo" Walsh, who hails from Walpole, and who was well known in the junior ranks a few years ago, and R. C. Wright, a Jerseyite, are sophomores at Dartmouth and are making their debut with the Big Green as golfers.

In fact, Walsh and Wright engaged in a play off with six other upper classmen for the fifth and sixth varsity berths.

After making the grade in a play off, Walsh and Wright lost no time displaying their ability under championship pressure by carding 73 and 74, respectively.

Walsh and Wright are fortified with as good short games as any player in the field. Walsh has plenty of distance off the tees and through the fairgreens and is deadly from 50 yards off the greens.

Wright is not long, but Oakley is built for his game, and he'll bear watching today, as will "Harpo," who is a great competitor in all branches of sport.

WALSH, WRIGHT GREEN STARS

Sides has been scoring in the low 70's for a fortnight. He was 70 during his pre-qualifying round and turned in a 73 at Belmont early this week.

After the first two holes yesterday, Sides was as steady as a machine, making only two slips, a slightly pulled tee shot at the fifth and under-clubbing himself at the 14th.

Mr. Sides may bring the New England title back to Harvard.

Besides Walsh and Wright, Dartmouth has two other serious contenders for the top honors, Dick Heneage and Bobby Jacobson.

But before the fourth New England intercollegiate championship is awarded to anyone, Anderson and Hafeli, two Holy Cross sophomores, must be considered.

With the possible exception of Turnesa, Anderson has had more championship experience than any player in the field.

For two consecutive years, he held the state caddy title, a feat only accomplished once before and he was the state Junior titlist in 1935.

Other Threats

On his showing yesterday, Anderson is playing the best golf of his career.

Hafeli, who comes from Peterboro, N. H., is a terrific hitter and packs a sound all around game. He was struggling yesterday during the out nine and used up 39 strokes, but he steadied down and raced home in 34 for his 73.

Among the other contenders who'll be dangerous today are Charlie Round, Brown; L. A. McGowan, Harvard; Dick Neilson; Middlebury. "Jigger" Statz, Holy Cross; George Enos, Harvard, and Lou Wyman, New Hampshire.

The championship is being decided over the 36-hole route. In conjunction with the first round this morning, Dartmouth is playing a team match with Harvard, which team takes on Brown this afternoon.

Crimson-Green Game Postponed

Wet grounds forced the postponement of the Harvard-Dartmouth game scheduled to be played at Hanover, N. H. this afternoon. It will be played at Soldiers Field, June 10 as part of a double header.

The Harvard-Yale Freshman game at Soldiers Field today is off and will be played Monday.

Dean Academy and Harvard Junior Varsity baseball teams will have to wait until a later date to settle their superiority on the diamond.

Inclement weather however does not feaze the crew and track men as their contests will go on as scheduled.

Bing Crosby Horse Winner

Agua Caliente, Mex., May 15 (AP)—The colors of Bing Crosby, film and radio singer, flew high at Agua Caliente's race track today with a victory by San Dieguito making it four straight triumphs for his stable.

The two-year-old filly won yesterday's feature race, a 4½ furlong sprint, in 55¼ seconds. She paid $11, $5.80 and $4.80.

Sides Most Serious Threat To Turnesa in College Golf

CONSISTENTLY IN LOW 70'S

By BILL GRIMES

Little Willie Turnesa, smooth swinging Holy Cross junior, is defending his New England Intercollegiate title today at Oakley Country Club against the largest and fastest field that has ever competed in this championship.

Although neither Yale nor Williams was represented, the field for the qualifying round exceeded even the most optimistic predictions, for there were 106 players in action.

Because of the large field, the committee, comprising Pres. Clarence P. Houstan, Tufts; Vice-Pres. Al McCoy, Colby; Robert B. Miller, Bowdoin; John Curley, Boston College; Ben Beck, Middlebury, and Clark Hodder, Harvard, changed the original plans, concerning the number of qualifiers by voting an increase from 30 to 49, which figure was reached by allowing the 82's to remain in the championship flight.

49 in Field

"I felt that by restricting the qualifiers to the low thirty," declared Pres. Houstan "that we were not giving the boys a fair break, especially in view of the fact that they qualified over the 18 hole route.

"To hold to our original plans would be dangerous to the future New England Intercollegiate championships.

"I believe that the New England is the major college championship of this section and, with more than one hundred entries, it's unfair to qualify only about 25 per cent of the field."

So, instead of a field of only 30, there are 48 collegians battling to strip Willie Turnesa of the title he took from Lynford Lardner, Jr., Harvard, a year ago.

Turnesa finished eighth in the qualifying round with a 75, which is a fine indication of the ability of the field.

WILLIE TURNESA
Defends N. E. College Title

Bob Sides, Harvard, Dave Walsh, Dartmouth, and George Hafell, Holy Cross, tied for the medal with 73s, while Gerry Anderson, Holy Cross, the former state caddy and junior champion, and three representatives of the Big Green, Dick Heneage, R. C. Wright and Bobby Jacobson, posted 74's.

Dave "Harpo" Walsh, who hails from Walpole, and who was well known in the junior ranks a few years ago, and R. C. Wright, a Jerseyite, are sophomores at Dartmouth and are making their debut with the Big Green as golfers.

In fact, Walsh and Wright engaged in a play off with six other upper classmen for the fifth and sixth varsity berths.

After making the grade in a play off, Walsh and Wright lost no time displaying their ability under championship pressure by carding 73 and 74, respectively.

Walsh and Wright are fortified with as good short games as any player in the field. Walsh has plenty of distance off the tees and through the fairgreens and is deadly from 50 yards off the greens.

Wright is not long, but Oakley is built for his game, and he'll bear watching today, as will "Harpo," who is a great competitor in all branches of sport.

WALSH, WRIGHT GREEN STARS

Sides has been scoring in the low 70's for a fortnight. He was 70 during his pre-qualifying round and turned in a 73 at Belmont early this week.

After the first two holes yesterday, Sides was as steady as a machine, making only two slips, a slightly pulled tee shot at the fifth and under-clubbing himself at the 14th.

Mr. Sides may bring the New England title back to Harvard.

Besides Walsh and Wright, Dartmouth has two other serious contenders for the top honors, Dick Heneage and Bobby Jacobson.

But before the fourth New England intercollegiate championship is awarded to anyone, Anderson and Hafell, two Holy Cross sophomores, must be considered.

With the possible exception of Turnesa, Anderson has had more championship experience than any player in the field.

For two consecutive years, he held the state caddy title, a feat only accomplished once before and he was the state Junior titlist in 1935.

Other Threats

Hafell, who comes from Peterboro, N. H., is a terrific hitter and packs a sound all around game. He was struggling yesterday during the out nine and used up 39 strokes, but he steadied down and raced home in 34 for his 73.

Among the other contenders who'll be dangerous today are Charlie Round, Brown; L. A. McGowan, Harvard; Dick Neilson; Middlebury, "Jigger" Statz, Holy Cross; George Enos, Harvard, and Lou Wyman, New Hampshire.

The championship is being decided over the 36-hole route. In conjunction with the first round this morning, Dartmouth is playing a team match with Harvard, which team takes on Brown this afternoon.

Crimson-Green Game Postponed

Wet grounds forced the postponement of the Harvard-Dartmouth game scheduled to be played at Hanover, N. H. this afternoon. It will be played at Soldiers Field, June 10 as part of a double header.

Dean Academy and Harvard Junior Varsity baseball teams will have to wait until a later date to settle their superiority on the diamond.

Inclement weather however does not feaze the crew and track men as their contests will go on as scheduled.

Bing Crosby Horse Winner

Agua Caliente, Mex., May 15 (AP)—The colors of Bing Crosby, film and radio singer, flew high at Agua Caliente's race track today with a victory by San Dieguito making it four straight triumphs for his stable.

The two-year-old filly won yesterday's feature race, a 4½ furlong sprint, in 55¼ seconds. She paid $11, $5.80 and $4.80.

GEORGE, DANNO GARDEN VICTORS

BICYCLE GRIND JUNE 6

Interest is picking up all along the line as the news spreads that the Jefferson Club of Cambridge plans on holding its second annual boys' bicycle marathon on Sunday, June 6.

Of real importance is the announcement today that the Gruen Watch Company Dealers of New England, handling the fine Gruen products made at Time Hill, Cincinnati, are once again donating the capital prizes.

The New England Gruen dealers come through handsomely today with nine beautiful and costly Gruens to be awarded the boys in the several divisions.

There are three Golden Hawk models, 15-jewels, with matching gold bracelets; three Hawk and three Condor models, all wonderful timepieces.

Blanks Out

The Hawks are named after Frank Hawks, famed speed flyer who has several national and world records to his credit.

One of each of the three Gruen models will be presented in each of the three boys' classes.

The entry blank, only official means of enlisting under the Jefferson Club marathon banner, will appear daily in the sports pages of the Evening American and Sunday Advertiser starting tomorrow.

Prospective entrants are [illegible] to register immediately [illegible] certain that their entry is filled out legibly and in full.

Three Classes

Once again Chief Marshal Reginald J. Murphy mentions that only amateur riders are to be accepted.

The real purpose of the event is to stimulate the competitive spirit among those boys who up to now have never indulged in the thrill of racing.

Remember, there are three classes, open to all amateurs of New England: Class A for those 16, 17 and 18; Class B for those 13, 14 and 15; and Class C for those 10, 11 and 12.

Snead Is Deprived Of Sub-Par 65

Bloomfield, N. J., May 15 (US)—Sam Snead's record-breaking 65 over the Forest Hill Field Club course was nullified when the Metropolitan Golf Association threw out the entire second round of play in the Metropolitan Open.

Max Kaesche, representing the association, cancelled the day's completed cards and postponed the second round until today. His action was taken following a driving rain which made play impossible.

More than half the field had finished when the downpour began. Several players were called in and told to discontinue shooting.

The first decision was to the effect that those who had stopped would be forced to continue from where they had been foiled by the weather.

received $989,000 and Dempsey $650,000. Tunney's purse was the largest ever paid to a boxer.

Louis and Braddock are certain to draw more than a million dollars when they clash next month. Braddock will receive 45 per cent of the purse, Louis 10 per cent.

Jimmy's end of the spoils will run close to $500,000. After management and taxes are paid off he should end up with $250,000. Enough to keep his family and himself in comfort.

LOUIS EARLY FAVORITE

LOUIS IS the early betting favorite.

Champions down through ring history have been climbing through the ropes in title bouts tops on choices.

When Braddock fought Baer, the latter was a 10 to 3 favorite. When Braddock won easily, there were cries of fake. The public could not understand how Baer could look as badly as he did against Braddock.

Max's knockout at the hands of Louis, and his defeat in England by Tommy Farr have convinced the fans that Baer was on the way out as a great boxer when he met Braddock.

Louis at the age of 23 has got youth on his side. Braddock is 30 years of age and has been away from the ring wars for two years. Age and inactivity conquer as many boxers as do right hand punches.

* * *

PAT McCARTHY LIKES BRADDOCK

PAT McCARTHY, former Roxbury heavyweight and now a Metropolitan police officer, is picking Braddock to win over Louis.

"I think Louis is a very much overrated boxer," McCarthy tells me. "True, Joe can punch, but he is very easy to hit. Max Schmeling proved that Louis can be tipped over by a right hand punch.

"Louis looked very weak against Bob Pastor. The latter is a defensive boxer. I think Braddock is a better boxer than Pastor, while Jimmy is also able to punch hard with his right duke. I look to see Braddock retain his title by winning on points."

McCarthy does not carry any marks from his years as a boxer.

"Boxing would be aided in Boston by more frequent shows," said Pat. "When I was boxing, there was a boxing card almost every night of the week. Youngsters eager to box received plenty of opportunities to get into action.

"When there are not many boxing shows, it is natural that promising boxers should turn their efforts elsewhere.

"I believe boxers should rough it more than they do. When I was training, I always walked to the gym, and then walked home later. Nowadays our modern boxers have an auto to take them to the gym, and also to get them home.

"Harry Greb is still my idea of one of the greatest boxers of all time. I trained with Greb when he was preparing for his winning New York bout with Tom Gibbons. Greb worked hard in the training camp, and didn't dissipate while training as some people claim.

"Dempsey at his best would have knocked out a fighter like Joe Louis inside of five rounds. Jack was always tops in my book."

McCarthy is Commander of the Suffolk Council, VFW, and will attend the memorial services of that organization along with other members of the Mahoney Post of Roxbury at St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury, at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

ED DON Too Good for KOVERLY

DANNO 'WHIPS' RUBE WRIGHT

By RINGSIDE

Ed Don George, looking every inch a champion, easily won from K. O. Koverly in 14m. 15s. with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam before 6000 fans at a Paul Bowser show at the Garden.

It was George's first American bout since he returned from a one year tour of the world during which time he wrestled all-comers.

George was in perfect physical condition and set a fast pace from the start.

He swarmed all over Koverly and when the latter resorted to rough tactics the former champion moved to close quarters where his strength overpowered his opponent.

George was particularly effective with headlocks, and after he weakened Koverly ended the bout by counting with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

Danno vs. Clark

Dan O'Mahony used his famous "Irish Whip" to win from Rube Wright of Texas in 33m. 22s. Wright gave the Irishman some stubborn resistance in the early stages of the contest.

Danno was in excellent condition and was able to maintain a terrif[illegible] pace which finally wore Wrig[illegible] down. Danno then called into play his "Irish Whip" and blasted Wright out of the picture.

Following O'Mahony's victory, Paul Bowser signed the Irishman to clash with Dazzler Clark in a finish bout at the Garden on next Friday night.

Clark is the only wrestler who has defeated O'Mahony since the latter returned to the United States last fall.

The gigantic Tor Johnson continued his winning streak when he disposed of Nick Lutze in 15m. 9s. with a reverse body lift. Johnson had too much power for the elusive and colorful Lutze.

WEIGHT HURTS WEIR

Caused Him to Lose Control This Spring

(This is the seventh and last of a series of articles by Billy Weir, relating his broad jump from University of New Hampshire to the major league Boston Bees.)

By BILL WEIR
(As told by Joe Cashman)

What a college hurler doesn't know about the art of pitching would fill several volumes.

I wasn't with the Bees a week before I found that out just from listening to veteran pitchers talk.

Stuff, anywhere you throw it, is enough to stop college hitters. You must have some stuff, of course, to get by against hitters in the majors, but it's far more important that you know what to throw and when and where to throw it and be able to throw it there.

What success I've had thus far hasn't been due to my ability but to the patience of Manager Bill McKechnie, the coaching of Guy Bush and the handling of Al Lopez.

WHERE'S THE CURVE?

McKechnie has given me every encouragement. Bush has taught me all his deliveries and all he's learned in more than a decade in the majors, while Lopez has yet to call for a pitch that has caused me any trouble.

My first start for the Bees was in Philadelphia in a relief role. I set nine Phils down in order to get credit for a victory before I went wild and had to be rescued by Bobby Smith.

I was so nervous all the while that I can remember little about it.

I just reared back and let my fast ball go, hoping it would land where Lopez wanted. It must have found the target most of the time, because the Phils didn't hit it.

"What's the matter with your curve?" Bush asked me after the game.

"I haven't one that amounts to much," I admitted.

"Well, you can't get by without one," he said.

The next day he began to show me how to perfect a "hook."

The next time I worked I had a fair No. 2, and it's been getting better, under Bush's guidance, right along.

I was not only nervous in my debut but also bewildered.

Gazing into the faces of fans back of the plate was something entirely new to me and upset me considerably.

WILD ALL SPRING

I had played before much larger crowds in several college games than the gathering present in Philly that afternoon, but I had never before pitched on a field that had stands back of the plate.

I was so befuddled that I couldn't distinguish the voices of my mates from the voices of the Phils' coaches, and it was a miracle that I didn't pull a few boners.

But after that one effort, I was o. k. All my starts since have seemed no different from college or semi-pro games except that the hitters have been harder to fool.

I did better than I or anybody else expected I would last season.

I know better than to think I'm a finished big league pitcher just because of that success.

I got by because I had a little something on the ball and was able to put it where Al. Lopez directed.

I wasn't able to hit the target Al held up for me in my two most recent starts this season, and I was knocked out of the box on both occasions.

I've been wilder than usual this spring.

I blame that on excess weight.

When last season ended I thought I might be a better pitcher this year if I could get heavier. So I spent the winter trying to build up and managed to put on several pounds.

As soon as I reported, I realized I had made a mistake. The extra poundage had tightened me up across the chest and shoulders, and I couldn't throw freely until I worked off this surplus flesh.

That required the waste of two or three weeks that I should have been devoting to getting my control.

QUESTION OF TIME

I've never been wild for very long, though, and I'm confident that I'll be again hitting the bull's-eye in my next start.

I certainly hope I can have a banner season, not so much for my own sake as for the sake of President Bob Quinn and Manager Bill McKechnie, who have done so much for me and for my mates, all of whom have gone out of their way to help me.

But whatever success I may attain, I'll be deserving of only a very small share of the credit.

I haven't yet made that rare jump direct from college to big league stardom.

I'm just a fortunate young man who is still very much a rookie with a lot to learn.

If I get by while learning it, it will be due to a kindly fate and a gang of colleagues who know all the answers.

(THE END)

GREAT GUY

Lawrence Track Favorite

Lawrence high school, host to more than 200 tracksters representing 11 schools, will enter the 16th annual Essex County track and field championships a tarong favorite to capture the Class A title at Memorial Park this afternoon.

The meet has been divided into two classes with the first of the nine events starting at 2:15 p. m.

The regulation outdoor events will be held—120-yard hurdles; 100, 220, 440 and 880-yard dashes; high jump; broad jump; shot put, and relay races at 880 yards.

Lawrence High's hopes rest a lot on the shoulders of Jimmy Jones, colored sensation, who only last Wednesday set a new mark in the high hurdles at Exeter Academy.

Jones was clocked in 16 seconds flat, clipping 1-5 of a second off the former mark set by Don Donahue last year.

As well as Jones, Lawrence has its Capt. Frank Dolan in the quarter mile, Bill Lombari in the shot put, Frank Calabrese in the broad jump and Kevin Donovan and Tony Andrukatis in the 100.

Haverhill, the dark horse of the meet, made a creditable showing against Governor Dummer as a warm-up for this carnival and may come through with an upset.

The schools entered are Lawrence, Haverhill, Lynn Classical, Lynn English in Class A, and Methuen, Newburyport, Central Catholic of Lawrence, Marblehead, Danvers, Gloucester and Beverly in Class B.

LEWIS Wins Over PERRONI

TAKES EIGHT OF TEN ROUNDS

New York, May 15 (US)—Patsy Perroni, who lasted ten rounds with Joe Louis in 1935, stood the limit with John Henry Lewis in Madison Square Garden.

Lewis, who holds the world light-heavyweight championship, won a unanimous decision over the plucky Cleveland youth in the ten-round main event, but didn't gain any new supporters doing so.

There was no title at stake and there was nothing exciting in the bout. Lewis, over-anxious and at times over-rough, outboxed and out-mauled Perroni in all but two rounds.

Perroni won the opening stanza with a jarring left and right to the jaw, and was awarded the eighth when Lewis landed a low blow. The rest was all Lewis, but none too impressively.

Lewis, the aggressor all the way, tried, and possibly too hard, to make a fight of it, but Perroni's holding tactics and Lewis' failure to land cleanly made that impossible. Lewis weighed 178½; Perroni, 185¾.

STOCKS Firm in Slow TRADING

STEELS, RAILS, COPPERS BEST

New York, May 15 — Stocks firmed moderately in slow trading. Rails, coppers and steels were among the firmest groups. Motors, utilities and rubbers held at or slightly above previous closing levels. Chrysler netted a small gain.

Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Atchison gained about a point each. Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific were actively higher.

In the steels Youngstown [illegible] a point and U. S. Steel a [illegible] fraction. Fair-sized gains were made in the metals by American [illegible], American Smelting and Kennecott. U. S. Rubber and Goodrich were improved in the [illegible] department.

Still responding to the increased dividend rate earlier in the week, Eastman Kodak on an independent move spurted better than 3 points before meeting with profit taking. Libbey-Owens-Ford ran up more than a point. Reynolds Tobacco B and National Biscuit hit new lows.

Bonds turned upward, with governments actively higher. Grains and cotton improved moderately.

Timely Items

Helping to bolster market sentiment were figures indicating this year's residential building activities may equal, if not exceed those of 1930. Construction contracts for homes thus far show an uptrend over 1936 of about 78 per cent. To statistical quarters improvement in this field is particularly encouraging in view of higher costs since the turn of the year.

While the contra-seasonal dip in last week's freight loadings was a bit of a damper for analysts who have been forecasting happier days for the transportation systems hope was expressed the recession was only temporary. It was believed by some [illegible] shipments later this month would expand inasmuch as [illegible] shipments since April 1 have been running below [illegible].

Sterling and the French franc were [illegible] a shade better at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, the former at $4.94 3-16 and the latter at 4.48¾ cents.

Conn. Building Permits Up

Building permits were granted [illegible] cities and towns [illegible] April for construction amounting to $4,684,651, a gain of 152.5 per cent over April, 1936, and 26.7 per cent over March this year. April figures are [illegible] any one month [illegible].

Permits for the first four months amounted to $[illegible] or 116 per cent over the same period last year and the [illegible] four months' total since 19[illegible].

Comments of Brokers

The prospects seem favorable for an extension of the rally in the immediate future and also, in my opinion, for a resumption of long-pull buying of selected issues.—J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

Lacking a really spontaneous rebound, the market will probably be a drifting affair, marked by selectivity and irregularity in the early future.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

There appears no explicable reason in connection with domestic industrial conditions for any drastic recession in the market.—Elmer H. Bright & Co.

On the fundamental side, it seems to us that only a major reversal in the Administration's fiscal policy would terminate the monetary forces which, starting with the devaluation of the dollar has made it necessary for investors and traders alike to guard against inflation, thus providing the background, which still appears to exist, for higher prices.—J. E. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

We would not yet force the advance, preferring to await more [illegible].—[illegible] A. Pierce & Co.

Some cheering word or happening in the Capital could inspire a fairly good flurry but the influences to policy of checking inflationary tendencies are unchanged and any undue activity would be a danger sign.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

MORTGAGE
Laws for Co-Ops
EXTENDED

The action of the Massachusetts legislature in formulating and passing the new co-operative bank regulations, which Governor Hurley signed a few days ago, makes it possible for the first time in history for the co-operative banks to grant mortgage loans as high as $10,000 on homes in this state and removes all previous restrictions on the granting of so-called "direct reduction" mortgage loans on monthly-payment terms running for periods as long as 20 years. Yesterday Philip A. Damon of Pittsfield president of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League, explained and interpreted this new legislation. He said

"The new regulations governing co-operative banks removed the $8,000 limit on co-operative bank mortgages which has been in effect for twenty-odd years and authorized such institutions in this State to loan as much as $10,000 on improved home property, but not to exceed 80 per cent of the property's valuation.

TREND OF TIMES

"Thus the legislature reflects the trend of the times in the planning, building and equipping of modern homes. Originally, co-operative bank loans rarely were made for more than about $3,000, because 60 years ago, when such banks were new and small, that was a reasonable and adequate maximum loan required for building or buying the average citizen's home. As tastes, customs, technical home equipment and building costs changed, the limit later was established at $5,000 and still later at $8,000. Now the increase to a maximum loan of $10,000 is authorized partly because the basic co-operative bank idea of systematic saving has constantly increased the millions of dollars available for sound loans and principally because more $12,000 to $15,000 homes are being built.

MORE FLEXIBLE PLAN

"The other principal provision of the bill removes previous restrictions upon the granting of so-called 'direct reduction' mortgage loans. A year and a half ago co-operative banks were authorized to grant loans of this type to an amount not exceeding 50 per cent of their total outstanding loans. Used in essentially the same form by both the state-chartered co-operative banks and the new Federal savings and loan associations, this 'direct reduction' type of mortgage proved so popular with the public that, during the past two months, more than half of all the co-operative bank mortgage loans in Massachusetts have been written on this plan. Governor Hurley's signature to the enacted bill was affixed in recognition of the public demand. Now co-operative banks may grant as many of these mortgages as their funds allow for periods ranging from five to 20 years.

"This is a distinctly modern mortgage-plan, attractive because of its simplicity, flexibility and monthly-payment provisions for paying off the loan at a definite time with a minimum expenditure for interest-charges. The borrower, under this plan, pays a fixed amount per month—the same amount every month during the term of the mortgage. Part of his first payment reduces his debt immediately, thereby slightly lowering the interest charge on his loan the next month. So, each month, less and less of his regular payment is required for interest and the continually growing remainder of his payment is applied directly and immediately to paying off the principal of his loan. By the end of the mortgage-term (or before, if extra payments have been made), the loan is paid off entirely and his home is free and clear."

Real Estate Still Sound Investment

A. George Gilman, chairman of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks committee on mortgages, and president of the Malden Savings Bank, told members of this association at their recent meeting that he believed real estate continues to be one of the soundest investments. He said

"If wealth is to be preserved in the present form it is evident that that money invested in realty probably will stand up against adverse influences as well if not better than other available forms of investment.

"Encroachment of the government in the mortgages lending field, especially in those sections served by mutual savings banks, is wholly unwarranted under today's conditions."

Professor Haney Says:

Good Products
RARELY SERIOUSLY HURT
By Price-Cutting

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, May 15—In connection with my criticism of the Miller-Tydings bill, the secretary of a Los Angeles organization puts the following questions to me:

(1)—"Do you know that a lot of manufacturers and merchants have been ruined by destructive business practices?"

My answer is yes; and monopoly has been one of the destructive practices. It is the encouragement of monopoly that is the danger.

I will add that I doubt that many dealers have benefitted permanently by becoming mere order-takers for price-maintenance goods.

(2)—"Do you know that some of those who sell well-known, standard-brand, trade-marked articles for less than cost, are charging the gullible consumer profits amounting to several hundred per cent on merchandise of unknown value?"

In reply, I will say, first, that I advocate every effort to stamp out the practice of selling goods below cost, for advertising purposes or merely to attract customers. I would support any reasonable measure to prevent "loss leader" selling.

This however, has nothing to do with the general policy of price maintenance. Price maintenance is like prohibition; cutting out "loss leaders" is like temperance.

* * *

Second, I want to say that I am willing to take my chances on being charged several hundred per cent on merchandise if there is competition. It is the price maintenance policy which usually gives the big profit to somebody.

And I will add that if consumers are so "gullible" then we certainly can't afford to allow price maintenance. The manufacturer would be able to fix any price and then sell his product to the "gullible" consumer.

I doubt if any good and fairly priced product was ever seriously hurt by honest price cutting. Certainly any evils here can be reached by stopping "loss leaders."

A New York reader asks: "How do you judge the worth of a stock? For instance. One sells at 136 while earning $6.50 a share. Another sells under 14 while earning $1.50 a share and pays $1.00 a year in dividends."

Answer—One general rule is that if any ordinary industrial company does not earn enough per share to make two-thirds of such earnings equal a bigger percentage on the price of the stock than the average yield on high-grade bonds, the price is too high. Just now the bond yield is about 4 per cent.

For example, two-thirds of $6.50 is about $4.34. That is 3.2 per cent on the price of 136, which is less than the bond yield. (The price is 21 times earnings per share.)

In the other case, two-thirds of the earnings per share is $1.00, which is 7.1 per cent of the price ($14). This is far above the bond yield and looks high. (The price is 9.3 times earnings per share.)

* * *

(1)—If a company conceals part of its earnings by maintaining large reserves, or otherwise, its reported earnings are understated and have to be increased for purposes of calculating value. (This may be true of the first company.)

(2)—If the trend of earnings is clearly and strongly upward, the current earnings may give too small a basis for figuring value.

(3)—If the company is a mining venture, its earnings may represent the depletion of an ore body and its dividends include an element of repayment of the investor's capital. Thus a higher price-earnings ration and yield are to be expected.

(4)—Much depends upon the need of the company for additional capital. If it does need to retain earnings or to sell more capital. If it does need to retain earnings or to sell more stock, its earnings may justify a higher price than otherwise (and a lower price-earnings ratio.)

(5)—The certainty and security of the earnings must be carefully considered.

* * *

I consider a price that is over 25 times earnings per share as very high and difficult to justify, though the allowances I mention above may be adequate. A price-earnings ratio below "8 times" is very low. Except in times of deep depression, when a stock falls that low, it looks suspicious. The present normal range for "industrials" is probably about 12-18. For mining companies it may be 8-12 times.

Suffolk Bank Is Now 'Federalized'

The Suffolk Co-operative Federal Savings and Loan Association of Boston, formerly the Suffolk Co-operative Bank, is now operating under a charter issued by the Federal Home Loan Bank board. This announcement was made today by Ernest A. Hale, president of the association, who reports that the board in Washington has approved plans, initiated by the shareholders some weeks ago, to federalize the association which has been a factor in the thrift and home financing field for over 50 years, having been incorporated in 1885

According to Mr. Hale, the new charter, granted by the Federal Home Loan Bank board, in no way affects the local character of the management or ownership. It transfers supervision to the Federal government and extends greater privileges of operation for the benefit of members and mortgagors.

Share accounts will be maintained substantially as in the past and mortgage loans will be made on the so-called Direct Reduction plan. However, extra privileges and facilities make the new move desirable, according to the association's president

Every person who invests in the association will automatically be protected against loss of his account up to $5,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. The Federalized association will enjoy other advantages. These include Federal supervision and examination, membership in the Federal Home Loan Bank System, availability of Federal subscription to its share accounts for the purpose of expanding its loan funds, in addition to the Federal approval as to solvency, policies and management which are prerequisite to conversion to Federal charter. Under the new plan the association will operate strictly as a mutual organization, privately managed by its officers as before. Earnings will be distributed equally to all shareholders, in proportion to what they have paid in.

HIGHWAY
OPPOSED

E. C. Benway, manager Motor Truck Club of Massachusetts, Inc. speaking at the gasoline tax diversion rally held in the Hotel Kenmore, stated that he had received from some of the members of the general court very encouraging reports on the stand these members would take when the motorists initiative petition against further diversion of highway funds is debated in joint session on May 19

Mr Benway also stated that he failed to understand that while approximately 75,000 people signed the initiative petition, the motoring public failed to convince the 11 members who constitute the committee on constitutional law that it was unsound and uneconomical to divert such funds. However, five members reported favorably, four partly in favor and two definitely opposed

CO-OPERATION URGED

In view of this fact he urged those present to make it a definite point to go back to their districts between now and Wednesday morning to contact every senator and representative and explain to him reasons why he should vote favorably on this petition. Also to put the members of their families to work telephoning to everyone in the district who own automobiles to personally call on the members of the General Court.

Mr. Benway seriously warned these present to make their pleas on the grounds that the motoring public is not as a group asking any special legislative favors nor is it asking the property owner to share in the construction and maintenance of highways. It is merely asking the members of the General Court to honor a petition for a change in the constitution so as to permit the voting public to vote on this matter

TRIPLE TAX PAID

It must in the next few days be brought forcibly to the attention of the motoring public that this special group has without protest been paying a triple tax of which at least the tax on gasoline should be used solely for highways and not for projects unrelated to highways.

Mr. Benway stressed to considerable length the Safety reasons why these funds should be used in building Safety into the highways. Almost daily some fatal or near fatal accident is caused at a dangerous hazard which if road construction had kept pace with motor vehicle volume could be removed. Building safety into highways will do more to save human lives than all the Safety campaigns that can be conducted

STOP!!!
GASOLINE TAX DIVERSION

1. "TAX" comes from the Latin, tangere, meaning "to touch." Massachusetts motorists are "touched" 40 cents every time they buy 10 gallons of gas. Average motorists, consuming 800 gallons per year, are "touched" $32.

2. Approximately $60,000,000 of gasoline tax revenues in Massachusetts have been diverted to other than highway purposes during the past six years—about $63 on each and every pleasure car and truck registered in the Commonwealth.

3. Gasoline taxes and registration fees are additional taxes on top of the motor vehicle excise tax that is paid on the value of the motor vehicle as property. Such additional taxes are justified when used for highway purposes. When used for general purposes they constitute a double tax upon motorists.

4. The gas tax paid by Massachusetts motorists—3c Mass. and 1c Federal—is a 32% sales tax on the present retail price of gasoline.

5. Apply a 32% sales tax to other necessities of life and you would pay 16c for a 12c loaf of bread; 16c for a 12c quart of milk; 45c for a 34c dozen of eggs; 91c for a 69c pound of steak; $6.60 for a $5 pair of shoes; $39.60 for a $30 suit of clothes, and $26.40 for a $20 dress.

6. Improved highways are the very foundation of the recreation business—diversion is a blow at recreational development.

PHOTOS FLOWN TO THE AMERICAN FROM LONDON BY MERRILL

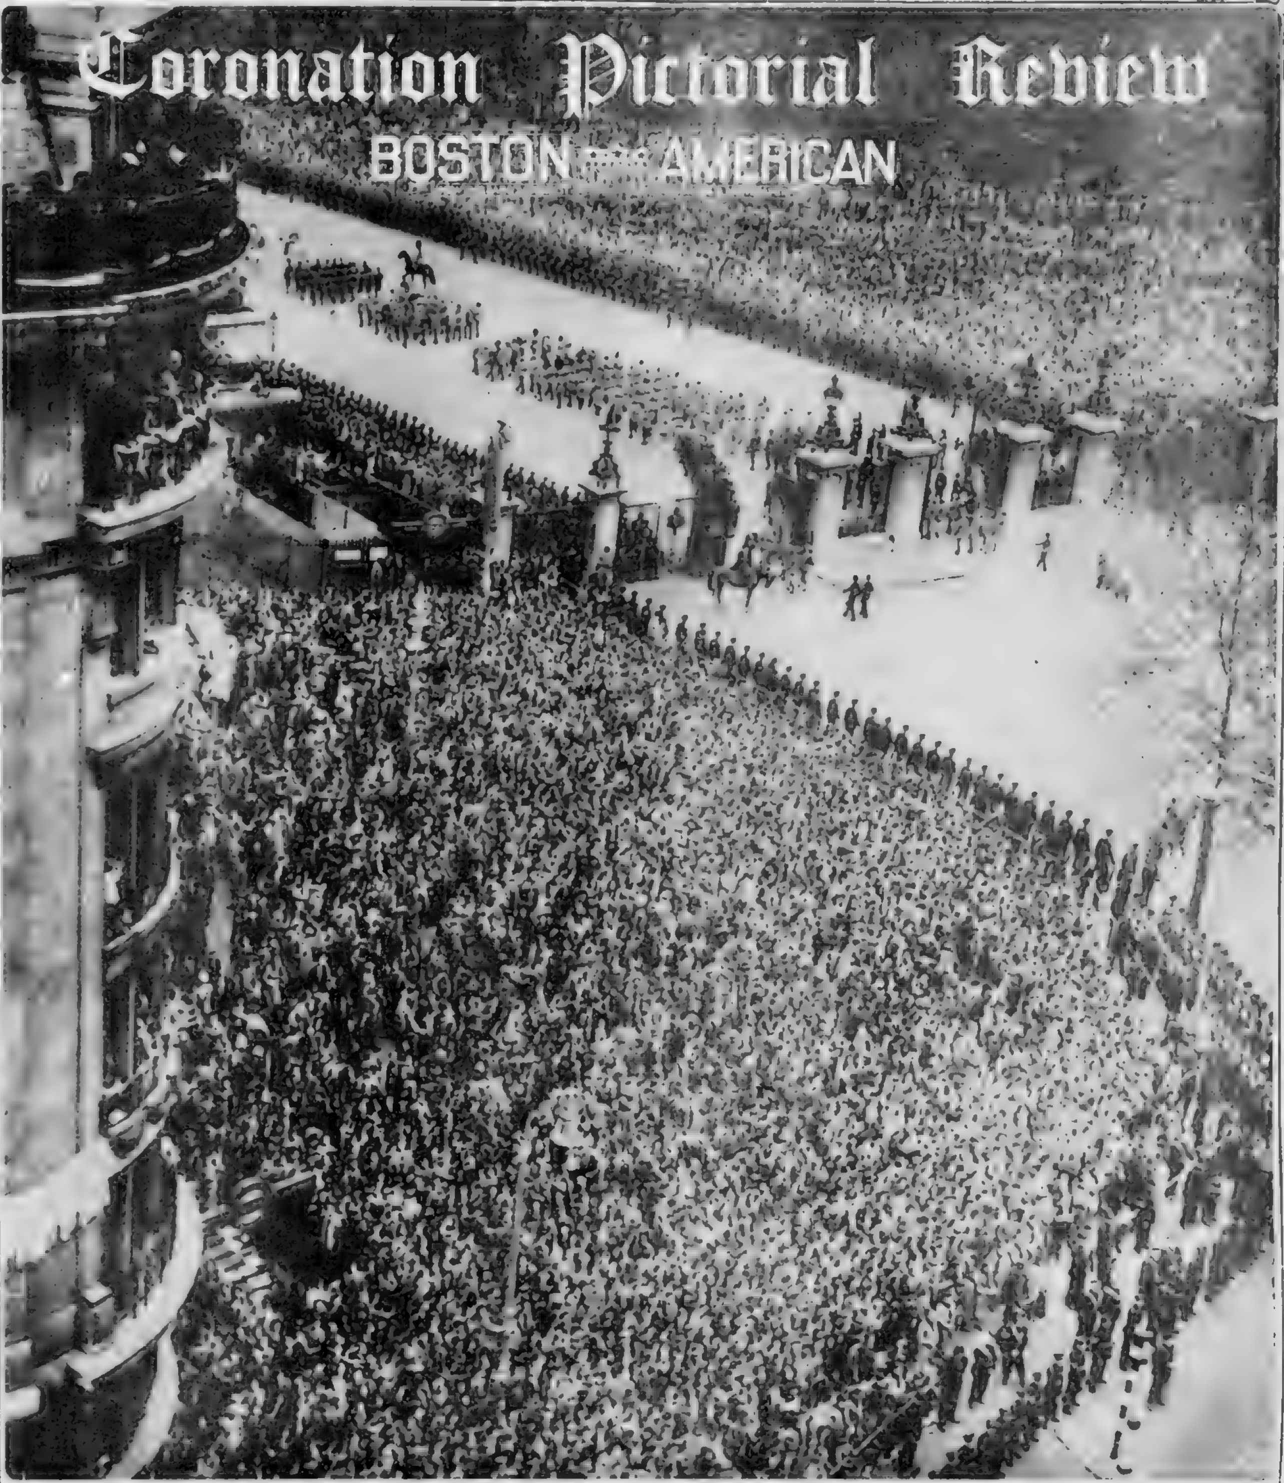
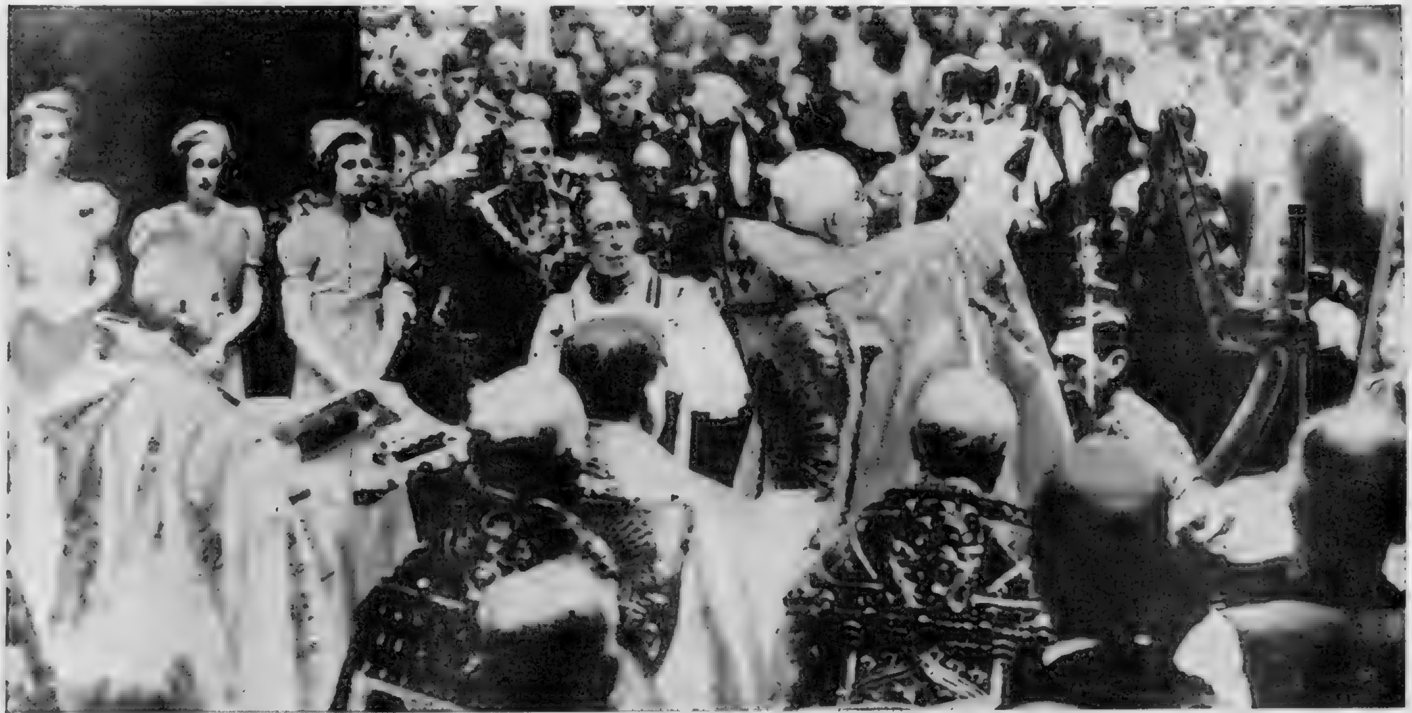
BOSTON AMERICAN



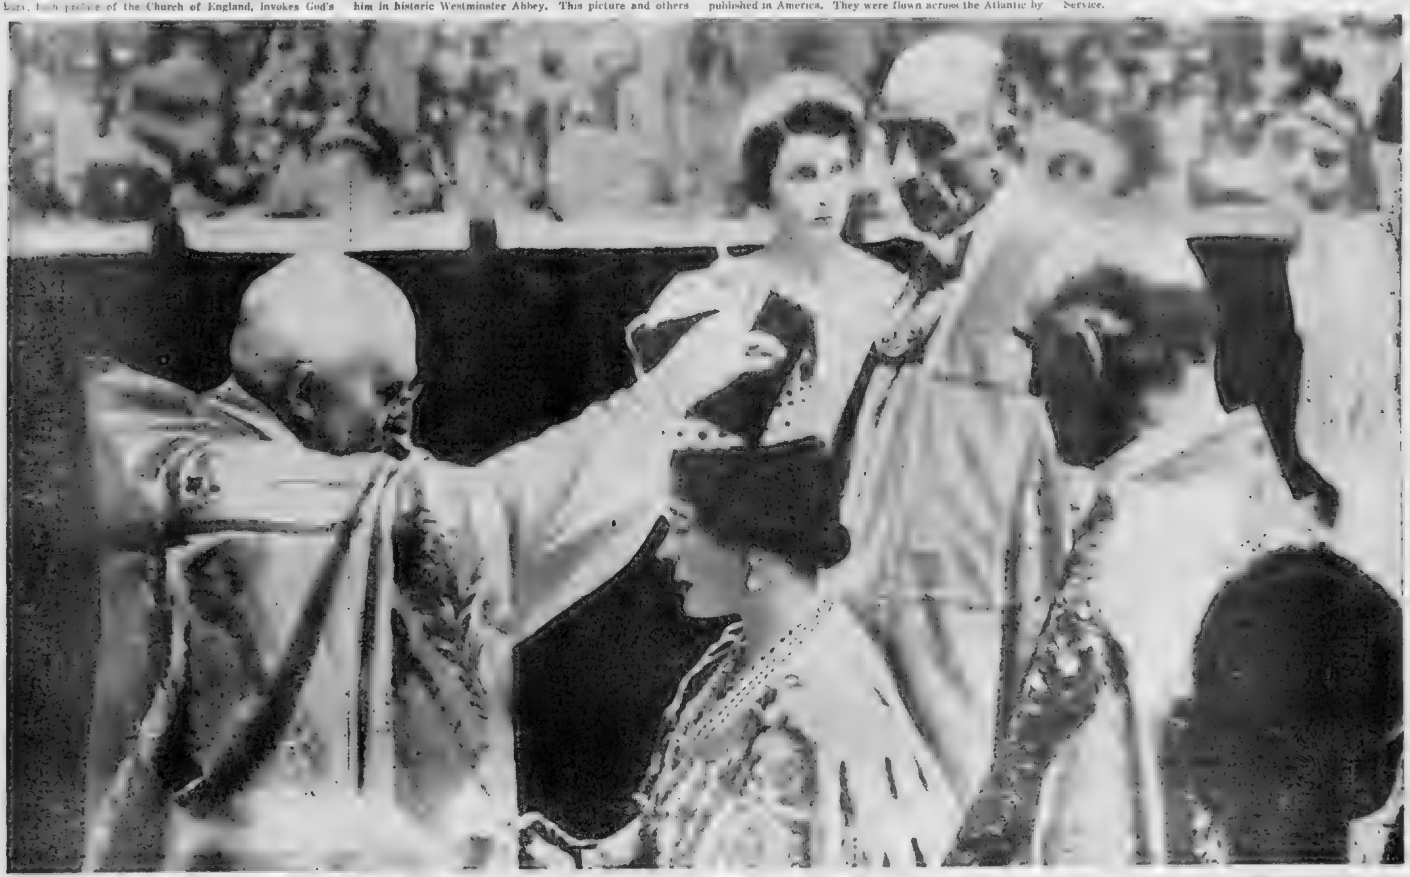
Picture flown from England by Dick Merrill, exclusively for the Boston American and International News Photo Service

WATCHING GREATEST SPECTACLE—This orderly and attentive throng watching the coronation procession is just a small segment of the vast multitude which lined London streets as the world's greatest spectacle is enacted. The view is from the marble arch as Colonial troops pass on the return march to Buckingham palace.

FIRST ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPHS OF CORONATION CEREMONY

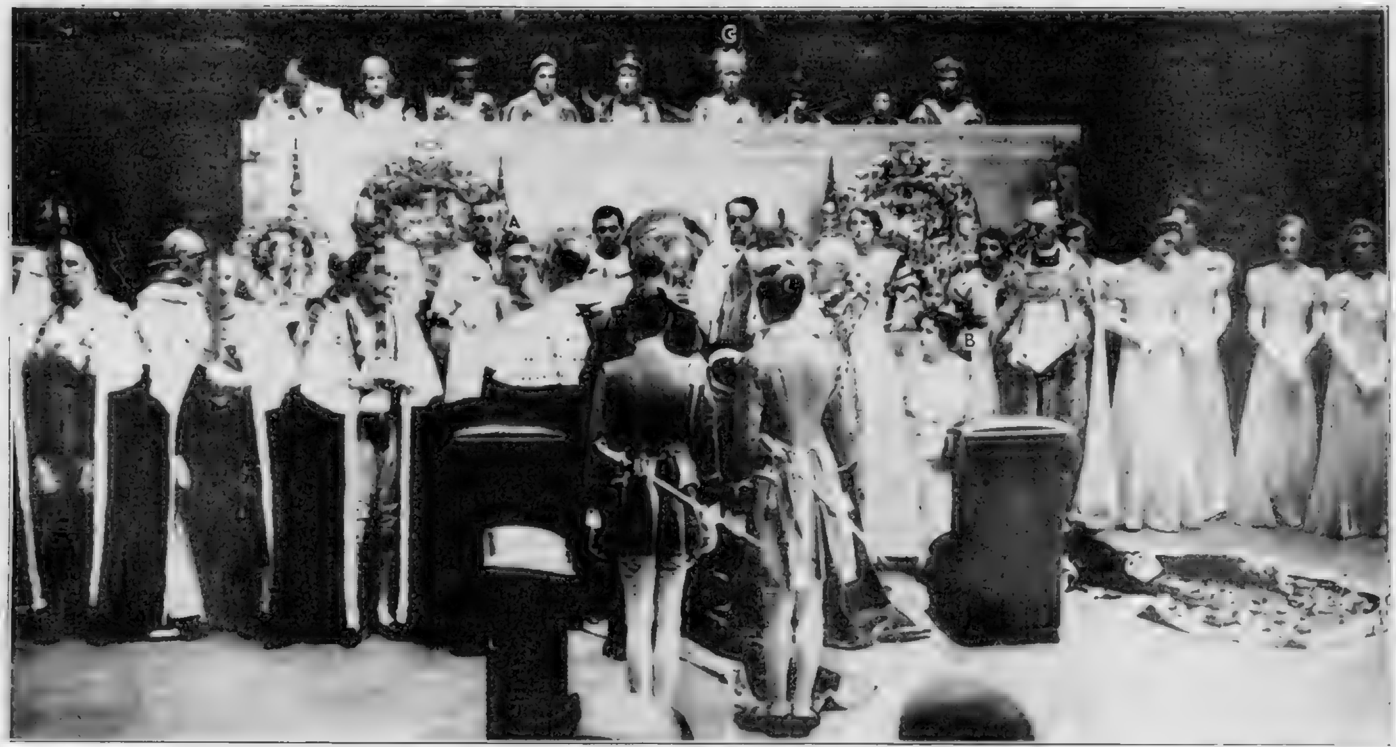


MOST SOLEMN MOMENT—Holding aloft the great crown of [illegible] Edward the Confessor, the Archbishop of Canterbury, [illegible] prelate of the Church of England, invokes God's blessing as he prepares to place the symbol of divine and temporal authority on the head of King George VI, kneeling before him in historic Westminster Abbey. This picture and others in the Boston Evening American's Coronation Review today are the first actual photographs of the London exercises to be published in America. They were flown across the Atlantic by Dick Merrill in a record, non-stop trip, made exclusively for the Boston Evening American and International News Photo Service.

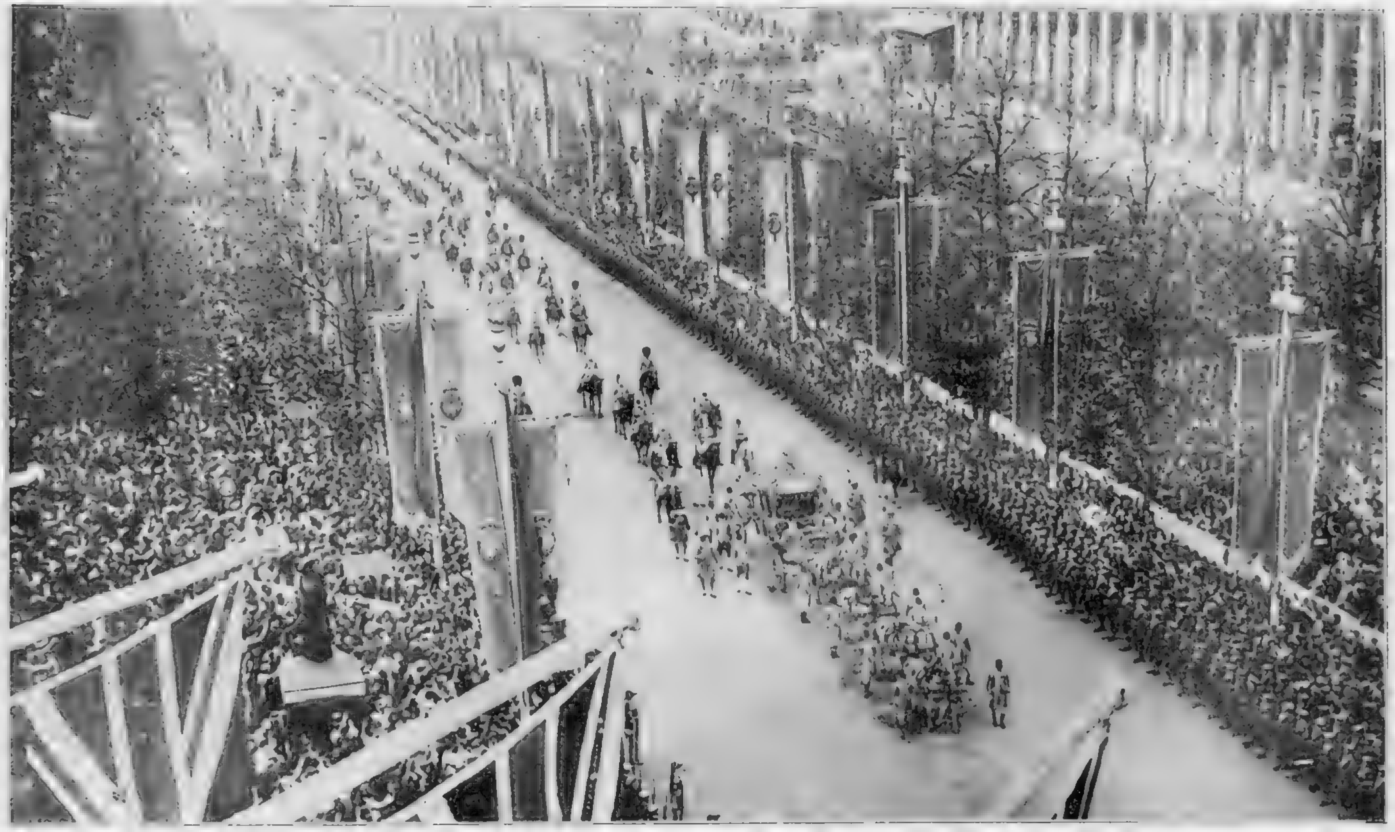


LOVE CLEARED HER WAY—As the Archbishop of Canterbury places the crown upon her dark-haired head, Queen Elizabeth may perhaps be thinking, involuntarily, of the other dark-haired woman, for love of whom King Edward VIII renounced his throne. That renunciation made it possible for Elizabeth to kneel here, before a glittering throng and in the presence of England's illustrious dead, to receive the golden and jeweled circlet which makes her first lady of the world's greatest empire. She is not herself of royal birth, though the daughter of an ancient Scottish family. (Picture flown from England by Dick Merrill exclusively for the Boston Evening American and International News Photo Service.)

CAMERA GIVES YOU FRONT SEAT AT LONDON PAGEANT

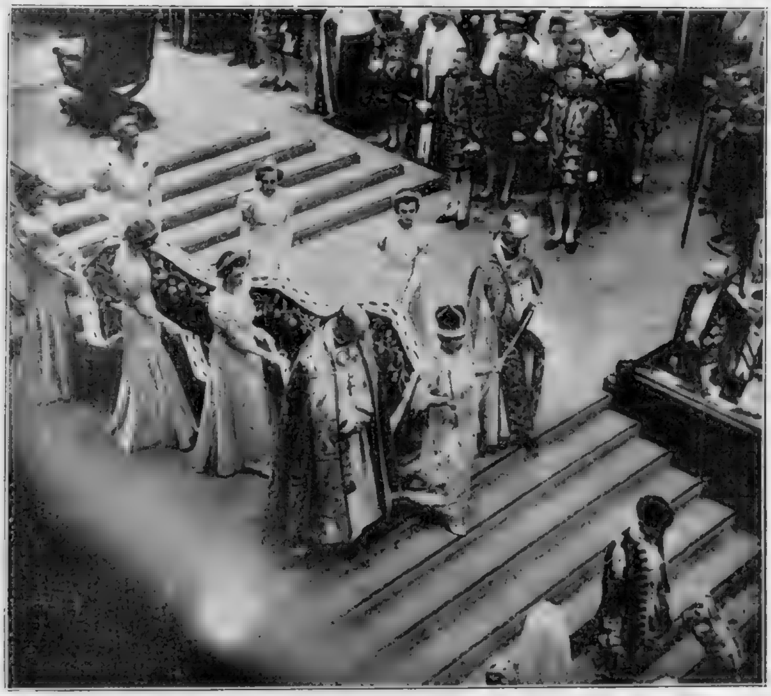


FRONT SEAT AT BIG SHOW—Cameras, strategically placed in Westminster Abbey long before the coronation ceremony, then operated automatically while the exercises were in progress, gave you this front seat view of rites climaxing the world's greatest spectacle. King George VI, not yet crowned, stands with bared head at (A). Seated (B) is Queen Elizabeth. In the royal box, upper center, at (C) is Dowager Queen Mary, her face sternly set to hide the emotion she must feel at this re-enactment of the scene in which she and the late King George V were principals more than a quarter of a century ago. To Queen Mary's left are her granddaughters, the little Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret.



EN ROUTE TO ABBEY—Between unbroken lines of troops, the royal coach occupied by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, heads the coronation procession en route to Westminster Abbey. This is London's famous mall, thronged by tens of thousands and decorated for miles with great banners which droop in the still air. Clouds threatened rain, but the storm had not yet come when this photograph was made. No vagaries of the weather could dampen the enthusiasm of the watching multitude. London was the scene of great celebration as George VI was crowned king of the British empire. (Picture flown from England by Dick Merrill exclusively for the Boston Evening American and International News Photo Service.)

PRINCIPALS PLAY ROLES IN COLORFUL LONDON PAGEANT



HER ROYAL MAJESTY—With six ladies-in-waiting carrying the train of her ermine robe, Queen Elizabeth of England descends the great stairway on her way from Westminster Abbey after the coronation. High ranking members of the clergy are at her side as escorts. She carries a scepter in either hand.

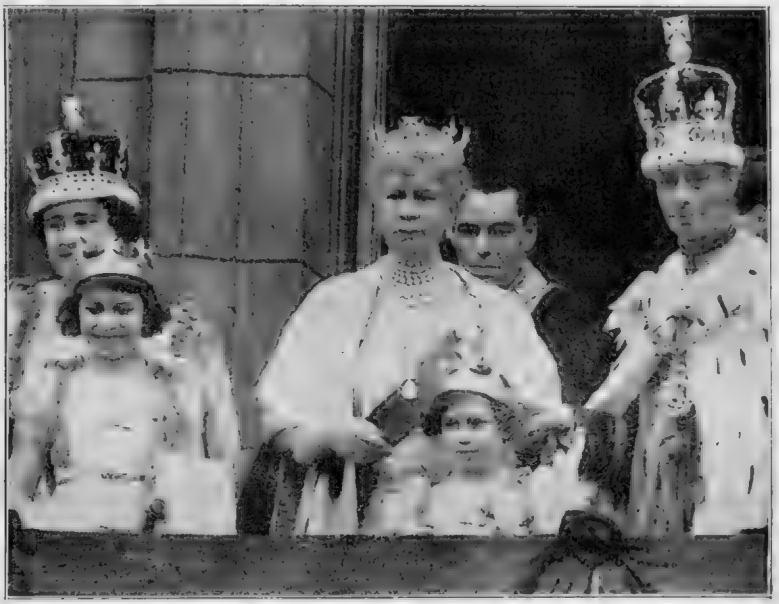
ENGLAND BENDS THE KNEE—Symbolic of England's fealty to newly crowned King George VI is homage paid by this peer, who kneels before the young monarch's throne in Westminster Abbey, just after the coronation ceremony. The solemn spirit of the occasion still has the King in its grip, as his grave face indicates. He cannot fail to think that his high position came to him through a series of events he could not have foretold even a short six months ago. Here his elder brother might have sat.



QUEEN MOTHER AND FAMILY—Sad but indomitable is the appearance of Dowager Queen Mary as she stands on a balcony of Buckingham Palace with her second son, newly crowned King George VI, her daughter-in-law, Queen Elizabeth, and her granddaughters, little Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret. On this same balcony, more than 26 years ago, Queen Mary stood after the coronation ceremony in which she and her late husband, King George V, were central figures. (All pictures on this page flown from England by Dick Merrill exclusively for the Boston Evening American and International News Photo Service.)

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Slave-Driving Parents The Divorce Court's Chief Aides

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Treat your children as human beings, not as your personal property. Remember that they also have brains that function and think. And don't get the idea that your greater age and experience entitle you to despotic powers in the home.

That is my advice to all parents, especially to those of the reader who signs herself "Melancholy."

It is my honest opinion that [illegible] per cent of the unhappy marriages that end in the Divorce Court are the result of fathers and mothers' determination to prevent a marriage before the ceremony and to frustrate it later on.

If we would try harder to understand our girls and boys [illegible] in their love affairs and [illegible] give them intelligent [illegible] we would do more [illegible] to safeguard their futures than we could hope to [illegible] years of fighting and [illegible]

Read my letter to Melancholy [illegible]

MELANCHOLY—A 20-year-old girl [illegible] to marry [illegible] parents [illegible] to and [illegible] a reasonable amount of freedom. Your father and mother are making a serious mistake [illegible] into [illegible] If you [illegible] have a [illegible] Papa and Mama [illegible]

DESPONDENT—The young woman who talks to you constantly of her other boy friends is either a fool or a shrewd girl trying to discourage your attentions. You must decide which. If you take my advice you'll declare a moratorium on your visits [illegible] out more with [illegible] Eventually you are bound to meet a girl [illegible]

A[illegible] of 19 [illegible] will [illegible] common sense.

MA[illegible] a mean, [illegible] How you can [illegible] between the [illegible] the boy she [illegible] I can imagine. You may marry the boy, [illegible] have his [illegible] I can assure you that [illegible] a bar to [illegible] end very [illegible] A great [illegible] never suspect the fact.

[illegible] we all like [illegible] hope to marry [illegible] retain our [illegible] you [illegible] to those [illegible] OPENLY

BILL—In a country just teaming with single girls, why must you chase a married woman? You are a confirmed optimist. Of course you may succeed where another man failed. Personally, I doubt it.

ALICE—Better marry the young man. Good bets like he are all too scarce these days. Unlike hat or dress shopping, bargain hunting for husbands doesn't pay. The more than 500 letters I have received from disillusioned women during the past month testify to that.

SAM—I wouldn't advise you to waste your time on a girl who refuses to give up her other boy friends. Too much competition before marriage is apt to mean too much rivalry after the ceremony. The beautiful thing about love is that we know when we have it and know, also, when we don't have it. Frankly I cannot say that this girl is in love with you.

A. R. C.—Give up school or give up the boy friends. Clearly, you are not the type of girl to have both. You are throwing away the best years of your life, as you will realize later on.

A. R.—Happily, Massachusetts has strict laws against defamation of character. Write to this thoughtless young man and ask him to cease discussing you. If he refuses, visit a lawyer. It won't be hard to silence these insidious rumors.

MRS. T. W.—What kind of a mother are you anyway? Insisting that your daughter become a model for such portraits! If you have half a brain, you'll have your girl capitalize more on what is INSIDE her head, less on what is outside. Nine hundred and ninety-nine mothers in a thousand will brave death to keep their children out of trouble. Certainly you are not of the nine hundred and ninety-nine. Money isn't everything in this world. Undoubtedly the future will teach you the truth of this statement.

JOHN—Table manners cost no money, only effort. I do not wonder that the young lady laughed at you. Why advertise your ignorance or lack of training? Instead keep your eyes open in restaurants and do as others do. Don't become self-conscious. Remember that all of us have attended formal dinners and banquets and suffered the humiliation of not knowing exactly the proper thing to do. Drink your soup from the side of the spoon. Eat with your fork, not your knife. Keep your spoon out of your coffee or tea cup. Those are the important things to remember.

Picking the Weak Spots in Enemy's Line

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Expert defense might be defined as the process of detecting the one weak spot in the enemy's line of fortifications.

North:
♠ 9 8
♡ A 7 6 4
◇ 10 8 6 5
♣ K J 10

West:
♠ 6 3
♡ K 10
◇ A 9 7 3 2
♣ 8 6 5 4

East:
♠ A Q J 10 4 2
♡ 9 3
◇ K 4
♣ 9 3 2

South:
♠ K 7 5
♡ Q J 5 5 2
◇ Q J
♣ A Q 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

South's second bid was questionable. His first had been a "near-minnie" and the fact that his spade King had been virtually marked as a full trick did not warrant a free rebid.

West opened his top spade. East won with the Ace and promptly laid down the diamond King following with a low diamond. West won with the Ace and, counting that declarer as well as his own partner was now out of diamonds, blindly shifted to a club. Declarer won, and led the Queen of hearts. West covered with a feeling of helplessness. The Ace won, and on a heart return East's nine and West's ten impotently fell under the Jack. The rest of the hand was a laydown.

It should have required very little imagination on West's part to have realized that there was precisely one chance to defeat the contract. On lead with the diamond Ace, he should have known that declarer and not East had the club Ace.

Declarer's bid had already been proved as pretty weak and with all the cards accounted for it was unthinkable that declarer could be missing the club Ace. Obviously, if East had the club Queen, it could do no good to lead a club.

The one chance was to promote the heart King to the trick taking value that West assigned it before he saw the Ace come down on his left. A diamond continuation would have done the trick. The one card that East might hold to save an almost lost cause was the heart nine and, as may be seen, he did have that card.

On a third round of diamonds East would merely have had to ruff in with the heart nine in order to force an honor from declarer, and then West's King would have regained full value.

Nervousness Danger Signal

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

One of my readers inquires whether there is any truth in the statement that "nervousness in a child is a serious affliction."

A great deal is written about the diseases of childhood but too little attention is given to this important condition. It [illegible] a matter of importance.

It is [illegible] be able to [illegible] signs of nervousness in a young child. Everybody knows that nervousness in an adult acts as a handicap. But few realize that this ailment in the grownup may be traced to neglect in childhood.

It is a disorder often entirely overlooked. This is not to be wondered at, because of the absence of pain or other suspicious symptoms during the early stages. But it should always be suspected in a young child who is restless and clumsy and "jerky" in action and movements.

Of course the word "nervousness" is applied to a multitude of disorders. The child may [illegible] be suffering from St. Vitus dance [illegible] backward in his studies. He has poor memory and fails to concentrate on his work.

[illegible] and determine exactly what the trouble really is. This can be determined only by a complete physical examination by a physician. I strongly recommend this procedure, because early recognition of what is wrong and its removal, means rapid recovery and complete cure.

SCALP MASSAGE RATES AS GOOD FACIAL

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright 19[illegible] Syndicate [illegible])

THE best facial one can get is a good scalp massage, if we are to believe the people who make a study of hair beauty and care.

Just any sort of massage won't do, however, [illegible] rubbing of the head as an irritating and useless [illegible]

[illegible] Place the fingertips on the scalp with a firm but gentle pressure and without lifting the fingers move them in a circular direction to rotate the scalp.

You should work from the top or sides of the head to the neck or from the neck to the crown, [illegible] Place the thumb at the nape of the neck with the fingers forward and press [illegible] at the base of the skull [illegible] the scalp upward.

Your scalp should be so loose that you can pick it up between the thumb and forefinger. [illegible] looseness is an indication of beautiful hair [illegible] With short hair, there is [illegible] demand on the tiny muscles holding the hair in place as another authority explains it, and thinning hair is no longer a strictly masculine worry.

In addition to scalp massage daily, use the exercises in the leaflet, "Facial Gymnastics," as a local circulation booster for keeping young. You may write to Ida Jean Kain, care of Boston Evening American, for the facial leaflet. Enclose a stamped addressed envelope.

Married Comrades

CHAPTER [illegible]

I KNEW better than to take Dicky's apparently casual question at its face value.

[illegible] I said [illegible] and I don't think I'm qualified [illegible] to subscribe to it. After all [illegible] married to Jack, you know."

[illegible] argued. Separated from her husband for months, even years, at a time, having no children, and with this shadow of another woman added to Jack's other derelictions, she would be superhuman if she didn't contrast Jack's neglect with Hal's devotion."

"Then you believe," I said slowly, "that a woman's love for her husband is measured by the [illegible] does for her?"

CHAMPION FOOL

"I'm probably the champion fool of the universe," he went on [illegible] It's all very well for me to say that Katherine ought to be [illegible]

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER 9

"LOOK here, boy, I'm a practical woman. You didn't ask my permission to marry my daughter. You went right ahead and got married, without asking anybody.

"I mean, what are you going to do? [illegible] kiss and run if that was your idea. You're not going [illegible] and forget you ever went through a ceremony [illegible]

"Lord knows I don't want to lose my child. I don't want to see her go off with a stranger. But I'm trying to be fair. I'm trying to keep my temper and find out what's in your head, even if I am a mother who—"

[illegible]

"Or if she thinks she wants to go with you, she can leave you and come back home to me and [illegible] where she's loved and [illegible] the two of you [illegible] you to make up your minds."

A Crowded Car

"Come [illegible]

[illegible]

"Then I'll get busy on the packing [illegible] She turned to Edward. "What time did you say you were leaving?"

He almost dropped his clinging bride. "My Lord," he said. "I forgot I came down here with two other fellows in a roadster. There isn't possibly room for one more, with all our baggage and everything.

"Sh!" Julie said. "Don't be dramatic. Now what does all this mean, Edward? You are going to give her up after all? Don't look at me that way, I'm just asking. After all, I am her mother. I have feelings, too."

[illegible]

"Any man—any real man," Julie's blue eyes were blazing, "would resent interference at this time. He'd want to take care of his bride himself. Isn't that right? Answer me, young man?"

"Yes," Edward said, "it's right. I have no excuse to make. I just haven't any money. I—I'm in a spot."

[illegible]

"Well, then, if I want to make Marie and her husband a little wedding present, is it any business of anybody's but mine?"

[illegible]

"There," he said, "now you can go on the train, son."

"And now," he said, "I'm going to give the bride a little present, too. A check for about 50 bucks, to buy some pretties."

"Oh, Charlie," Marie breathed. "Oh, Charlie—"

A Sad Farewell

"This oughtn't to LET you [illegible] checks. "And besides you make me look like a female Shylock, and I only wanted her to be h-happy. I'm g-giving her my diamond clip, myself!"

"Mother—NO!"

"I never wear the dang thing, and you know it. I hate jewelry." Julie shouted. "Come on, and pack or you won't get the train in spite of what Charlie's doing."

"A drawing room." Charlie echoed. [illegible]

"Darling," Marie said, "don't you feel well?"

"Perfectly." [illegible]

"I was just thinking," he said, "of how surprised my folks will be."

Nancy Bosson Makes Debut At Cambridge Party

By BETTY ALDEN

"WE HATE to eat and run, but you know what training rules are," was an apology which Nancy Bosson and her mother, Mrs Campbell Bosson, heard over and over again last evening . . . as the curfew hour approached for all the athletes who attended Nancy's debut dinner dance in Cambridge . . .

FRANCES HOVEY

The apology was really more polite than literally correct, however . . . because the stalwart members of the various crews and track teams hand ample time for a number of dances between the dessert course and the time they bade their hostesses goodnight . . . and sought out their downy bunks to get plenty of rest before today's contests . . .

But the occasion did revive a question which has long perplexed collegiate undergraduates . . . whether to go out for sports and, if successful, be lionized at parties until ten or eleven o'clock . . . or to refrain from the arduous labor and strenuous exertion of sports and be able to enjoy to the fullest extent the parties which begin late and last far, far into the night . . .

Nancy brought a number of her classmates home from Smith College with her for the week-end . . . and even after the exodus of track and rowing stars there was still a long enough stag line at last night's party to give the girls a chance to have plenty of dances while Sammy played their latest musical favorites . . .

The debutante wore a springlike gown of yellow organza trimmed with green flounces on the skirt and a green belt, and she carried a corsage of orchids . . . She and her mother received before a bower of spring flowers which repeated the yellow and green of Nancy's outfit as well as the pale blue and fuchsia which fashioned Mrs. Bosson's gown . . .

Nancy's house guests are Winifred Crary of Long Island, Elizabeth Wright of Abington and Josephine Buckingham of Waterbury, Ct. . . . They found their place cards at the head table along with a number of sister debs . . . including Mary Coleman, Nancy Osgood, Nancy Peabody, Olive McIlwain and Anne Lyman . . .

Dinner partners of the young ladies at the head table were A. Davis Bosson, the debutante's brother, Robert Seamans, Welles Eldy, James Tyson, Silas Wheelock, Joseph Watkins, Lane Blackwell, F. Gorham Brigham, Jr., Frederick Greene, Jr., and Stratton Christenson . . .

Milton Garden Tour Next Week

FAIR WEATHER or foul, garden lovers will have an opportunity to see the loveliest and most picturesque of Milton's gardens next week when the Milton Garden Club sponsors an all-day pilgrimage to the show places in the town . . . for if Tuesday, the 18th, the day set for the garden openings, proves to be stormy, the affair will be postponed to the following day, Wednesday, the 19th . . .

Mrs. Theodore Brown's beautiful estate on Brush Hill road is making its debut in the realm of garden openings . . . for though Mrs. Brown is a leader in horticultural events in Milton and [illegible] she has never before opened her place to the public . . . She will be assisted in welcoming guests by Miss Frances Hovey, Miss Harriet Whittier and Mrs. U. Haskell Crocker . . .

Before strolling through winding, flower-bordered lanes to [illegible] natural pond on Mrs. Geoffrey Whitney's estate, the visitors will be welcomed at the gate by Mrs. John Balch, Mrs. Walter Brooks and Mrs. Frederick Houghton . . .

Other Milton women who will proudly exhibit their horticultural achievements in their natural setting are Mrs. Charles P. [illegible], Mrs. Carleton Richmond, Mrs. Philip Y. De Normandie, Mrs. John P. Merrill, Mrs. Holden McGinley, Mrs. Ralph S. [illegible] and Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell . . . Those who want to make a full day of it may relax over a tasty luncheon at the Milton Club between morning and afternoon sight-seeing . . .

Mrs. George Shattuck of Brookline is inviting a number of debutantes and their escorts to a starlight dancing party at her Warren street estate on the evening of June 4, to meet her niece, Virginia Markham . . .

Henry Sears Files Wedding Intentions

HENRY SEARS and his bride-to-be were here early in the week visiting his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears at Beverly . . . but as soon as they filed wedding intentions with the town clerk in Beverly and talked over their plans with the clergyman who is to tie the knot (at a date as yet unrevealed), they hurried off to New York to make final preparations for the wedding . . .

The future Mrs. Sears is Mary Pouch Smithers, widow of [illegible] Austin Smithers, prominent New York yachtsman, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar D. Pouch of Greenwich, Ct. . . . Henry is also a well known yachtsman . . . and member of the Eastern Yacht, the Union Boat and the New York Yacht Clubs . . . He maintains an office on Park avenue from which he directs research studies in oceanography . . .

[illegible] Henry Lovett Smith is chairman of the committee for the event which includes Mrs. Edward Burlingame Hill, Mrs. [illegible] de Menocal, Mrs. F. Murray Forbes, Mrs. Frederick S. [illegible], Mrs. Philip Gardner and Mrs. F. Gordon Patterson . . . A long list of distinguished patrons and patronesses is sponsoring the concert.

SHOWER OF CONFETTI SENDS SOCIETY HONEYMOONERS OFF ON TRIP TO BERMUDA

BRAZIL NUT PIE NEWEST SURPRISE

By MARTHA LEE

Instead of the usual flour, shortening and water, this one is composed of Brazil nuts and sugar, and that's all. Mixed cold, the shell is ready to serve without baking, unless of course a cooked filling is chosen.

The unusual choice of Brazil nuts as the chief ingredient might suggest need for considerable [illegible] in preparing. But such is not the case. Just put enough Brazil nuts through a meat chopper to produce a cup and a half of ground [illegible], add three tablespoonsful of sugar, mix [illegible] and [illegible]

[illegible]

BRAZIL BANANA CREAM PIE
1½ cups ground Brazil nuts
3 tablespoons sugar
Salt
1 cup cream
4 bananas
Whole Brazil nuts

LEMON FILLING
3 egg yolks
1 1-3 cups sweetened condensed milk
Juice of 3 lemons
Grated rind of 1½ lemons
[illegible] egg whites
6 tablespoons sugar

BRAZIL CHEESE BALL APPETIZERS
[illegible] teaspoon [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] teaspoon salt
1 cup grated cheese
1 egg white
Crushed Brazil nuts

Mix [illegible] brown. Serve hot on toothpicks as an appetizer or with salad.

BOSTON after DARK

By

GEORGE HOLLAND

St. Elizabeth's Hospital, 73d Day.

Now, about the ladies in white . . . Much of it in a spoofing vein, but all of it showing interest, the unwieldly correspondence which has helped to pass the time in Room 317 for the past ten weeks and three days, has referred to the nurses. This is a token of public interest in the doings behind the silent outer walls of a hospital. This interest has been reflected in several attempts by the playsmiths and picture studios to dramatize what goes on in the conservatories of life and death . . . There should be a great story yieldable by a major hospital. The fillums haven't got the real thing successfully yet . . . "Men In White" was quite phoney and highly stagey, although it did win a Pulitzer prize . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

But even a practiced reporter finds it highly difficult to trellis a hospital grapevine that works . . . Confine an experienced reporter in a jailhouse, the brig of a battleship, in a prison or a concentration camp or any place where the social contacts are hostile, and he may emerge with a story of fine detail and action but they deal from the bottom of the deck in one of these scientific institutions to keep a patient peacefully oblivious of what's happening no farther away than the room next door. You become a number when the doctor passes you over to the care of the house doctor and the nursing staff. Your subdued correspondent, for instance, is No. 317 and if you write the numerals, then turn them upside down, you will detect that the number reads "lie" . . .

Some Nice Little Lies:

Well, that's what happens. You lie there and they lie to you . . . Nice consoling white lies. The nurses won't talk. If, by chance, the name of a fellow-patient is mentioned by some other dignitary such as a doctor, a visitor or a friend from the outside, a silly guy like No. 317 can learn his fellow patient's fate. Only when in answer to a question, one of the smiling ladies in white will say: "Oh, he (or she) is doing nicely." Once in a while, by reading the death notices, the questioner detects a slight digression from the truth . . .

Doctors are better sources of information. Most of them, particularly if they have been friends or acquaintances from the outside world, are willing to prattle on about their patients. Their descriptions are generally impersonal and too technical to be very interesting. Naturally, the doctors are more willing to tell about their good "results" . . . A "result" is what you are at the finish. It's pleasant to be a good "result" . . . The doctors beam about you then and discuss you clinically with their friends. Of course if you turn out to be a highly unworthy "result," talk about you, except in an eulogy, ceases . . .

The medical business has a lingo all its own . . . Lacking a grapevine of any account, your envoy can pass along a mere word or two. The lingo seems to lack color, at any rate. For instance, an operation is an "op" . . . When a patient is awakened in the morning, the nurse-ical way of saying it is "being opened up" . . . This was a bit confusing for a few days to No. 317, who thought that, in the night, experiments had been made in anatomical areas other than the bum left leg . . . When a patient is tucked away for the night the informal official way of putting it is that he has been "closed up" . . . When you get morphia, you get a "hypo," but any other kind of a jab with a needle is an "injection" . . .

The smock-like garment—stylish only in that it is backless—[illegible] of "bed-gown," and this swanky little [illegible] having been found to be equally appropriate [illegible] . . .

[illegible] is known as the "O. R." . . . As you see, [illegible] and originality in what little of [illegible] No. 317 has [illegible] to absorb . . . When a patient [illegible] . . . When a patient wins a battle for [illegible] . . .

One has a thoroughly vexing time interviewing a nurse. Even when you are an inmate like 317, the gals are very cagey, but perhaps the greatest triumph of a long reportorial career came when your correspondent, partly to keep in practice and greatly through curiosity, hurled questions at seven bewildered young Florence Nightgales who were inveigled over a period of hours upon one pretext or another into Room 317. They rubber-soled in, parried questions or answered them, and rushed to the safety of the corridor.

What They Confess:

The main question was: "Have you ever fallen in love with a patient?" A well-rehearsed series of leadup questions preceded the one at issue . . . By his unprofessional eagerness to drag out the answer "yes," your reporter learned later that at least two of the "yeas" were given as part of the professional routine, i. e., pretend that the patient is always right . . . But of the seven, five of the ladies in white admitted that at one time or another they had been smitten with one of their objects of mercy . . .

Another confessed that in training days she had something resembling a school girl crush on a gent of heroic stature whose chief charm at the time was that he never complained . . . One of the five "yeas" was proud to acknowledge the fact that her prospective bridegroom first came to her attention when she was assigned to nurse him . . . The two "nays" were very positively on the negative side, one of them thought she might be attracted to the right man, "after he got out," the other has never seen a patient who could be anything more than a patient . . .

It took hours to make this canvass. It was made quite impersonally, as your reporter believed. The lopsided victory for the affirmative helped slightly to inflate what little remained of No. 317's once sturdy ego. Yes, it was a pleasant night. A patient really could be more than a possible "result," a room number of a curious specimen to be humored and cured if possible . . .

So Dr. Norton the next morning came into the lair of his humblest guinea pig snorting like a dragon.

"Stop asking the nurses questions," he ordered. "Three of them have talked to me already."

"It that so, doc?" No. 317 inquired, pretty calm about it all. "What's it all about?"

"It's about you all right. You should read your chart. They've got you down for a slight mental aberration. One of the nurses wanted to know if I had known you very long, and two of them came out flatly with the suggestion that I call in a psychiatrist."

No. 317, as soon as he gets the leg in a cast, is going to try another poll—this time of the male patients. The question will be "Should patients marry their nurses?" and he is going to pray that the "nays" have it . . .

Winchell's Film Still Big Hit

The enormously successful Twentieth Century Fox musical, "Wake Up and Live," moves over to the Scollay and Modern screens this week, when "Men In Exile," featuring June Travis, Dick Purcell and Victor Varconi, will be the co-feature.

Walter Winchell, Boston Advertiser columnist, and Ben Bernie, the Old Maestro of the air waves, are responsible for most of the howls in this film laugh-getter. Jack Haley, local boy who made good on Broadway, is the singer whose "mike fright" spoils his first big radio opportunity. Alice Faye, Rudy Vallee's protege who's going places in pictures, is radio's "Wake Up and Live" girl who shows him how to conquer his mike-jitters and helps him to success.

Hollywood Brilliantly Portrayed

By PEGGY DOYLE

"A Star Is Born," United Artists' technicolor tattle-tale concerning cinema celebrities, is at once the most human and the most glamorous story that has ever come out of Hollywood.

It is a compelling and moving answer to the question: Are Hollywood film stars people? [illegible] at Loew's State and Orpheum [illegible]

Janet Gaynor and Fredric March, its stars, have seen to that, as have its first-rate supporting cast, its producer, David O. Selznick, its director, William A. Wellman, Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Robert Carson, who made the adaptation, its film editor, Hal C. Kern, its photographer, W. H. Greene, its color designer, Lansing C. Holden; Max Steiner, who wrote its musical score and everybody else who had the slightest detail to do with this notable example of fine picture-making.

• • •

Photographed throughout in technicolor, a medium in which Producer Selznick is pioneering with happy results, "A Star Is Born" is the first picture in which audiences are not color-conscious so right and undistracting are the color effects.

It is really a surprising film to have come out of Hollywood, for it exposes every hokum stunt and beglamorizing trick that the super-duper press agents are festing. [illegible] ever invented. From start to finish it is completely absorbing because it has a story to tell, tells it honestly and because its characters are flesh-and-blood people who tick.

Janet Gaynor, who was no favorite of ours until her recent "Ladies of Leisure" and, of course, always excepting her heart-stirring portrayal in "Seventh Heaven," has never given a finer performance. She is the small-town girl, the one in 100,000 who makes good, marries a great movie star, [illegible] in the race for fame and clings to him with touching tenderness when success and friends desert him.

March as the [illegible] star is magnificent. [illegible] drunken binges that [illegible] land in the next morning's [illegible]

TO TURN

This remarkable young artist was likewise interviewed. Her career to date has attracted critics, symphony conductors and lovers of music throughout the nation. Her renditions were nothing short of superb, consisting of excerpts from the most difficult concertos and sonatas composed by the great masters.

Truly the young lady should rise to great heights as a classic artist. It doesn't seem a far cry to predict her becoming one of the celebrated violinists of the world.

The dramatized story of C. D. Cooper, who was convicted of murder on purely circumstantial evidence, will be a highlight of "Johnnie Presents," which features the music of Russ Morgan in its broadcast (WEEI) this evening from 8:30 to 9:00 p. m.

Vocal highlights will be provided by Frances Adair, Glenn Cross, the Three Harmonics, the Rhythm Rogues and the Swing Fourteen, accompanied by Morgan's orchestra.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Here is Mr. Turp of Brooklyn again.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 13.

Dear Sir—My wife Ethel ses she is glad they got the king crowned at last all right and the queen too. But she ses the tough part of it is she will now have to set through news reels of it for two or three weeks more when she goes to the movies.

Damon Runyon

My wife Ethel ses it was bad enough looking at news reels of them getting ready to crown them for the last month. She ses that she did not mind it for the first couple of weeks, but after that fell like screaming when she saw them. My wife ses too much of a good thing is enough that she is sick and tired of seeing that old wagon they pulled the king and queen around in.

She ses she does not want to sound as if she had a bad disposition but that she is getting so she does not like to look at the king and queen any more neither and if the news reels do not find something new she will quit going to the movies until they bring in the news reels of the Duke of Windsor's wedding and she can see what Mrs. Warfield wears.

My wife ses she tries to be patient with the news reels even when the baseball season opens and they start showing pictures of baseball players although they make her feel like screaming too.

She ses the baseball players always look to her like the same guys doing the same thing that she saw in the news reels the last time the baseball season opened and she ses if they have to keep showing them they ought to anyway show them upside down just for a change.

She ses who wants to look at a lot of ugly muggs with chewing tobacco in their mouths and dirty uniforms and I ses why Ethel honey baseball is our national pastime and they are very wonderful athletes except when they play for the Brooklyns and are very interesting to many people and she ses well they ought to wash them and shave them before putting them in the news reels for people to look at right after dinner.

My wife Ethel ses it is the same way when the football season starts. She has to set through news reels showing a lot of young guys training for the football games at the colleges when they ought to be studying their lessons and not bothering the movie customers and afterwards she ses she has to set through news reels showing football games that all look just exactly alike and who cares. She ses I feel like screaming. That is what my wife is always saying. I feel like screaming.

She ses sometimes when it is not baseball players or football players it is prize fighters or wrestlers and who wants to look at prize fighters with hairy legs and wrestlers with fat stomachs? She ses she is getting sick and tired of looking at guys with no clothes on in the news reels including guys in row boats and pole vaulters and runners.

She ses one reason she likes to get out of the house once in awhile is to see somebody different and I ses look Ethel honey if you are insinuating something about my legs and my stomach why don't you come right out and say so and not be insinuating?

But my wife Ethel ses the worst thing the news reels do is to take close up pictures of senators and congressmen in Washington making speeches about something. She ses this is worse than anything she knows even a news reel of some dame missing a big ship with a bottle of champagne as it slides into the water.

She ses why are senators and congressmen always such homely guys? She ses is there a law against nice looking guys being senators and congressmen? She ses is there a law against them having their clothes pressed and their hair combed and do the news reels have to take close ups of them instead of a mile off and why don't they find out beforehand that their voices sound terrible in the news reel?

I ses look Ethel sweetheart those people are big people and make the laws and everything else for us and it does not make any difference if they are good looking or not or have their clothes pressed. I ses some of the worst looking senators and congressmen in Washington have the best noodles and figure out the best laws and she ses well all right but don't they have no dentists in Washington?

We had a big argument about all this in a movie last night and my wife Ethel talked so loud that people around us were saying shush, shush. Finally the manager acme down where we was and wanted to know what it was all about and just then the news reels started showing a parade of some lodge holding a convention somewhere and my wife Ethel ses I feel like screaming and the manager took one look at the screen and ses madam you come outside with me and I will scream with you.

Yours truly,
JOE TURP.

History of Law Told In New Encyclopedia

Everyone knows that under the law everybody is free, everyone has a right of trial by jury and women can own, buy or sell property.

But did you know that once men were considered part of the land, trial was by torture and women could not make a contract or acquire property?

Did you know how all this change came about and through what process our present day law came to us?

The history of law, clearly, understandably and thoroughly related is told in the Standard American Encyclopedia which the Boston Evening American is making available to its readers for a little more than a few cents a day.

This subject of law, like thousands of others, is treated interestingly and instructively in this encyclopedia, volume IV of which appeared today at every coupon redemption station throughout Greater Boston.

Then on Saturday after you have collected six consecutively numbered coupons bring them with 44 or 68 cents to any redemption station. You can find their addresses in the advertisement appearing in the Boston Evening American in connection with this sensational offer.

The only difference in price is because of the selection of two bindings. Seeing is believing so come and see for yourself. It's an unsurpassed book offer.

PLEAS Unearth MONEY

(A SHORT STORY)

"John Vane's down front, Evelyn!" he said excitedly. "You might be able to nick him for a healthy contribution. He's the utilities millionaire."

The evangelist saw John Vane as he stepped out on the platform. He looked to be a tired and singularly unapproachable old man.

"Your sermon moved me," he said soberly. "You'll hear from me."

Late the next morning, Burke burst into her hotel room brandishing a noon edition of the local paper. Sister Hunt slowly read the large, black headlines:

AMERICA'S THEATER

The first recorded performance of a play in America was in 1665 in Virginia. The play bore the exciting title of "Ye Bare and Ye Curb." Nothing more is known except that the three producers were hailed into court and acquitted of whatever the offense may have been.

* * *

The first two performances of the first play written by an American, "The Prince of Parthia," by Thomas Godfrey (1736-1763), were given by the Hallam Company, organized in 1752.

* * *

In 1798, the Hallam Company, under the name of the American Company, produced the first comedy written by an American for the stage. This was "The Contrast," by Royall Tyler (1757-1826), a satire on the New England point of view toward the drama. The play was a success both in New York and Philadelphia, but when it came to Boston it had to be advertised as "A Moral Lecture in Five Parts."

* * *

Dissension in the American Company caused a split-up, and management fell to William Dunlap (1766-1839). Of his more than 50 plays and adaptations, "Andre," the first American tragedy based on American history, remains his best.

Babe Ruth Wins Undisputed Title of 'The Forgotten Man'

The Boston Red Sox bought Ruth from Baltimore in 1914 and paid close to $3000 for him. The New York Yankees bought him from the Sox at the close of the 1919 season, paying $125,000 for him, a ridiculous price at that time.

It was with the Yankees that Ruth established record after record. He clouted over 700 home runs in his 20 years in the majors. In 1927, he hit 60 circuit clouts, thereby setting a new high in round-trippers.

Ruth hit three homers in the World Series game of Oct. 6, 1926. In the 1928 series he repeated that performance.

World Series records made by Ruth are far too numerous to mention. But the greatest thrill that the Babe and thousands of fans got occurred in the 1932 series against the Cubs.

Charlie Root was on the mound for the Cubs. "The Babe" was being jeered by both the Chicago fans and players. With the count three and two, he calmly stepped back from the plate and pointed to the fence in right-center field. And, sure enough, he smacked the next pitch over that wall.

Fight Title Mix-Up

With Max Schmeling and Joe Louis in training for a shot at Jim Braddock's crown next month, and Promoters Mike Jacobs and Jimmy Johnston lining up their legal forces to determine who will obtain the services of Braddock, it looks as though the pre-fight hullyhoo is on.

Johnston, representing the Madison Square Garden, seems to hold the stronger hand with an apparently fool-proof contract binding the champion to make his first title defense for the Garden group against any opponent they choose to name. They have already selected Schmeling, who earned the honor by "eliminating" Louis last summer.

On the other hand, Jacobs can pay Braddock double the Garden offer to fight Louis.

League Plans For Calendar Reform

Reform of the calendar, so that it may be balanced with the solar year and the seasons and remain perpetual in form, is now under consideration by a special committee of the League of Nations.

The proposed reform would mean a re-arrangement of the 12 months into four quarters of 13 weeks or 91 days. These quarters would comprise 13 Sundays and 78 week-days. There would be 26 week-days in each month.

The 365th day would be inserted in the calendar as an extra Saturday between December 30 and January 1. This day would be known as Year-End Day and would be a universal holiday.

On leap year, the extra day would be taken care of as another extra Saturday, called Leap-Year Day, between June 30 and July 1.

Most government officials, scientists, business men and statisticians are in favor of stabilizing the calendar. The first day of January, April, July and October would fall on Sunday.

The shifting holidays would also be fixed. July 4, for instance, would always come on a Wednesday.

Religious and secular holidays would be stabilized. Christmas would fall on a Monday, while Easter would have a certain date, to be fixed by the clergy, just as December 25 was chosen to be Natal Day.

Sole Island With Tree

In 1882 a citizen bought the island for $500 and sold it in 1867 to the city of Boston for $3800.

The city planned to use it for a recreation park or for public buildings, but the plan fell through. And now the city leases lots to fishermen.

DeMAR Recalls RACES

DeMar did little running as a boy, although he always trotted to school instead of walking. It wasn't until his third year at college that he started to run as an athlete. At that time he became a member of the University of Vermont cross-country team.

He left college in the middle of the term and went to live in Melrose. Although he went to work as a printer, his one ambition was to become a marathon runner.

His success may be judged by the fact that in his first B. A. A. marathon, he annexed second place. The next year, 1911, he won the race. Then, according to the experts, he was "all washed up."

Eleven years later he fooled them all when he won the B. A. A. Marathon for the second time. He won it again in 1923, 1924, 1927, 1928 and 1930.

DeMar was also a member of three Olympic teams.

"Marathon" is sprinkled with amusing anecdotes that prove that DeMar is an excellent student of human nature.

BUZZINGS ON BEES

Bees are of no little value to a farmer. The bee carries pollen from one blossom to another thereby proving itself a most beneficial aid in cross-pollination.

* * *

* * *

The worker bee is the wonder of the hive. It will go many miles for nectar and come back in a direct line—hence the phrase, "bee-line."

* * *

Drones are killed by the workers at the end of the season. Since they don't work, they consequently can't be fed during the long winter, when nectar is unobtainable.

* * *

The "swarming" season takes place usually in April or May. From the hive comes one queen (there is one queen in every hatch), who circles high and signals to her followers. One-half of the hive inmates swarm after the queen and climb, as a dark cloud, into the sky. The cycle starts once more when a suitable hive is found.

GLORY

By the cannon's roaring blast;
I've seen the red deck glisten
With the blood of Death's repast.

I've seen the sabers dripping
With the blood of the fallen foe;
I've heard the white sails ripping

I've seen the smoke of battle
Swirl listlessly o'er the bay;
I've heard the low death rattle

All this, the glory of the fight
And the rapture of the strife,
And in it implanted life.

A Deserved Tribute

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT spoke as a great patriot and statesman in his support of national defense before the cadet corps of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College.

Speaking to young men training for the agricultural professions, he said:

"There is no use in handing on an improved agriculture UNLESS WE KEEP AN INTACT NATION."

Expressing his pride in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps as an agency of national security, he said:

"Some people think of military training in terms of acute pacifism. YOU and I do not.

"WE THINK OF IT IN TERMS OF THE PRESERVATION OF THE NATION."

And finally, the President stated the crowning truth about the aspirations of the American people to peace and security THROUGH ADEQUATE PREPAREDNESS, saying:

"OUR PREPARATION IS HONESTLY MADE FOR DEFENSE, AND NOT FOR AGGRESSION."

MR. ROOSEVELT'S tribute to the young men who are being trained for citizenship by the Reserve Officers' Training Corps comes at an opportune time.

The lazy, the cowardly and the downright disloyal groups among them have been the tools of insolent propagandists against American ideals.

THE President of the United States has done a tremendously wise and commendable thing in expressing appreciation to these fine young patriots.

His pride in the young men of America, who are training themselves to KEEP THE NATION INTACT whether the future brings peace or war, is shared by the entire nation.

Distinguished Service

THE citation which was the basis of the award of a gold medal to Director Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation is interesting.

The medal was awarded by the National Institute of Social Sciences "for distinguished services rendered to humanity."

The citation described Mr. Hoover as:

"One who has been instrumental in establishing a complete change in the psychology of the boys of the country by having dramatized the G-Men instead of the criminal, thereby reducing in marked degree crime in this country."

Teaching young boys to honor the law above crime, to respect the officers who enforce the law, is the type of CRIME PREVENTION that will rid the nation of criminals.

This newspaper, recently commenting on the increase in prison populations, said the education of youth AGAINST CRIME would change this perilous trend.

That is what Mr. Hoover is doing—teaching American children that CRIME DOES NOT PAY.

He is doing it by giving the nation an example of honest and effective law enforcement.

New Hope

It gives this city parity with New York and other ports in the matter of obtaining and filling contracts.

It offers assurance that the Commission with the former Bostonian, Joseph P. Kennedy at its head, will cooperate with us in our efforts to obtain our due share of commercial prosperity.

Boston, therefore, should be prepared to help herself. We have been asleep too long. Our piers are obviously inadequate and our facilities outmoded. The harbor itself needs and must have numerous improvements.

With Federal, State and municipal aid, rehabilitation can and should be started. It is more than a local enterprise; all New England will share the benefits.

Nearest American city to Europe, 200 fewer miles to travel, Boston ought to play an increasingly prominent role in the maritime affairs of the world.

Vote Yes

WEDNESDAY the two Houses of the Legislature, in joint session, will debate and decide the biennial sessions issue, the year's most important business. The decision should be favorable.

The people of Massachusetts are paying $800,000 annually for Senators' and Representatives' salaries and expenses.

Consequently it is for them to say whether this $800,000 bill, or most of it, will be eliminated every other year.

Forty-two of the 48 States have adopted biennial sessions and have found them the way to sound, intelligent economy and better laws. Massachusetts will prove no exception.

Let the members of both the Senate and House of Representatives vote Wednesday to give their constituents the right to settle the biennial sessions question.

Such a vote will be a VICTORY FOR DEMOCRACY.

Any other would be PROOF OF AUTOCRACY,

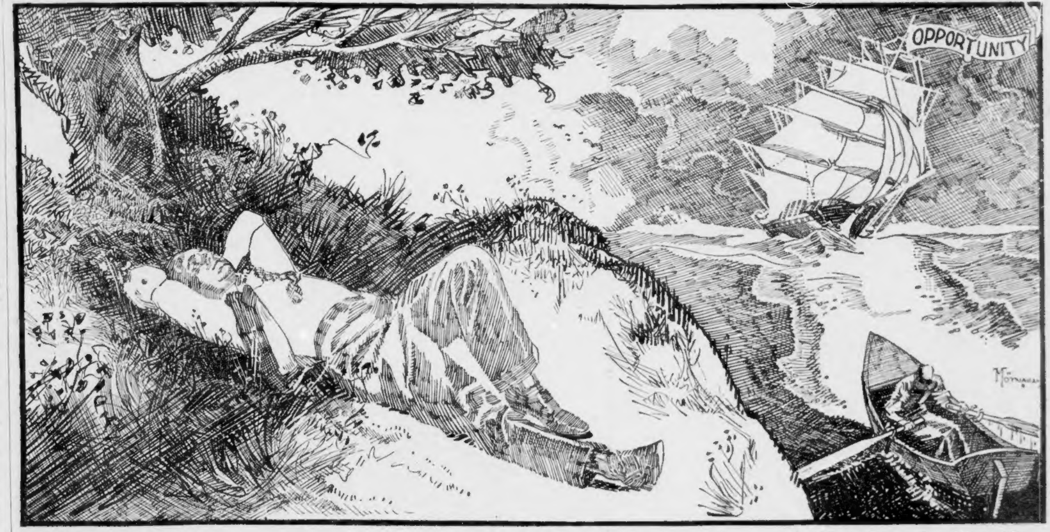
Your Ship Comes In



The Good Ship Opportunity Never Docks at Dreamland. It Has No Derricks to Lift Men Aboard. Men Must Row Out and Hoist Themselves Aboard.

THERE ARE two kinds of men: One that sits down, does nothing; the other that keeps on going, does whatever it is possible to do. In Mr. John Moynahan's admirable picture you see both kinds.

The young man reclining so comfortably under the tree you know well; there are millions like him scattered over the United States. He and they are the trust-to-luck, come-what-may, fellows with nothing to do except to "wait until their ship comes in."

You know also the other young man, he that works, takes the oars, rows, goes out to meet the ship and climb aboard. He and his kind succeed; work reaches the ship more quickly.

The ship, its sails spread to the wind, riding so near and yet so far, is OPPORTUNITY. For a little while it stands by, beckoning, calling, inviting. Soon it will be gone.

And with it, as captain, mates and crew, will go those young men that were willing to work, study, read, think and take any kind of job they could get, while striving for better.

The other young men, the recliners and sleepers, that hope the ship will come up to the shore, stop and let them roll aboard, will stay behind. Success doesn't want them.

As Shakespeare wisely said:

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Omitted, all the voyage of their life

There are indeed shallows and miseries for complacent recliners; tides too often omitted mean men omitted later on.

Never in this country's history has there been discouragement as widespread as today.

Never has there been so general a belief that the world owes the individual a living, and happiness and security as well.

Never so universal a determination to sit down and let "the other fellow do it."

All the more reason for seizing the oars, applying one's strength and MOVING AHEAD.

True, the young have not found life as easy as they expected to find it; those, for instance, that have come out of college hoping to discover the world waiting for them.

They and the old, that had hoped to end life more peacefully, should bear in mind that the past cannot be undone, that the record as written must stand.

But the Opportunity of the present hour is here, it is EVERY MAN'S, his to take or his to leave.

With it, and undoubtedly with the start that can be made NOW, the past may be atoned for and the right future secured.

Every man can do something, or he can at least TRY to do something.

If he cannot be the head of a big enterprise, he can run errands for some enterprise. He can make a start, move, BE ON HIS WAY.

The important thing about work is not work itself how much of ourselves we put into work. For like the athlete who concentrates all his energy on building his muscles, the man that puts all his brains into his work need never worry about results.

The youth that enters a race does not ask, "What am I going to get OUT of it?" He says, "What am I going to put INTO it?"

A job, any job, is a race and not a difficult race in a world where so many are not racing. It is not hard to pass tombstones, for they stand still; it is not hard to pass human beings that IMITATE tombstones.

The man in the boat with the oars in his hands, bending to the task, is going ahead. That is the thing for every man to do.

Then, whether he reaches the ship and shines among men or founders on the way, lost in the fog of average mediocrity, he will at least have DONE HIS BEST.

Man's business is TO MOVE, not to fall back and slumber, letting others do the work.

To give all that one has, whether it be less or more than the other man has to give, that is the way to success.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, May 15—Purely personal piffle: Suggestion for a revue title: "Dit Donc!"—meaning "Say you!" Top radio drool: Those go-to-bed skits. My wife never misses naming a hit song the first time she hears it. Stage show I enjoyed most this year: "Excursion."

Spook stuff: An anonymous clairvoyant in Colorado for five years has been sending me predictions about my personal life that have come true. You learn from a motor trip to Wilmington that 42 duPonts are listed in the phone book. Naïves say: "All the duPonts are hard workers."

Stay home, write travel stuff and grow rich: Frank Sullivan has made some nice chunks writing about imaginary visits to Hollywood, Paris, etc. And historians say one of the better descriptions of Venezuela was written by James Jeffrey Roche, who had never been there.

For real Broadway color: Lindy's at the dinner hour. Cub reporter thrill: Coming upon Alice Roosevelt Longworth smoking a cigarette in the garden of the Longworth home in Cincinnati. All the Eddies in New York have of a sudden become Eddys, for goodness sakes!

Only musician I ever heard to make a mandolin orchestra entertaining: Dave Apollon. Some years ago at a gallery I saw a painting, "At the Ferry," which I have long coveted, but dealers never heard of it. The Rha Carleton once had a patron who ate a chilled grape fruit salad at 3 o'clock every morning. He claimed it kept his weight at normal, although he could eat what he pleased during the day.

Movie disillusionment: The odds are 100,000 to 1 against a movie extra becoming a great star. After hearing most of the recent talkie tunes, one has a new appreciation for the supremacy of Irving Berlin. Prediction: Wynne Murray of "Babes In Arms" will be the next Kate Smith of the radio.

Dead ringer for Sam Bernard in "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer": Sam Rosoff all duded up in riding clothes for a canter in Central Park. For 21 years I have averaged writing 8500 words a week. Voice: "Why not call it a day?"

My father always slept with a .44 revolver under his pillow and my maternal grandfather racked a loaded shotgun over the kitchen door. And neither would have killed a house fly.

I once sat an hour in the rain in the Bois to watch Edith Wharton drive by. Disraeli interests me as much as any figure in English history.

No person I know can get so incensed over political muddling as Percy Crosby. I have never heard anybody in the Bronx talk like, well, say Gregory Ratoff. Prettily named rural highway: Saw Mill River road.

Few forthright artists have mucked-up their careers so completely as John Barrymore. Favorite tree: Magnolia in bloom. I can listen to Broadway phoneys by the hour. No class talks so entertainingly.

Albert Payson Terhune and Gelett Burgess can quote limericks all evening and never run out. I know a great industrialist who will go no place on Wednesday night where he cannot hear Fred Allen's broadcast.

No columnist ever created a character to equal Don Marquis' "The Old Soak." The most futile hour of the day—between 6 and 7 in the evening.

Most alert of the hotel press agents: The Waldorf's Ted Saucier. Royal faux pas: In saying farewell to an English duke at a dinner party Harry Silvey murmured: "Good night, your Dukeship."

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Harry Gordon Selfridge has gone British in a big way. They can say now that the sun never sets on the British flag and Harry Selfridge. Well, it's a wonder it didn't happen before. When I talked to the brisk little man about a year ago I couldn't detect much Yankee left in him except, of course, for his perpetual energy and enthusiasm. He's been over there quite a while now, some 28 years, in fact.

It was Harry Gordon Selfridge, one-time partner of Marshall Field, who took American advertising technique over to London and made them like it. He had the colossal gall to open a huge department store, American style.

You can't imagine, nowadays, what that meant. To attempt to teach a nation of shopkeepers how to keep shop was like teaching grandma to milk ducks. The tale of this amazing and amazingly successful commercial adventure is fascinating. Here are a few highlights:

Up till then, London's shops hadn't advertised. Selfridge spent $500,000 before he opened his doors. London shops had always hired floorwalkers who looked like earls, to walk up and down and shoo out people who weren't buying. Selfridge begged all and sundry, from Belgravia to White Chapel, to come to his store and stay as long as they liked even if they didn't spend a sixpence.

HE WAS A SENSATION

It was an explosion when the bally Yank installed a lounge, an emergency hospital, a library, a silence room, a bank and a tea-garden, just to please the customers, or anybody dropping in. The man's very existence was excruciatingly painful to the old-line London shopkeepers. Little cared Harry Gordon Selfridge. He was out on a limb, in the biggest gamble of his life, ready to go broke or make a great fortune. He was there to make friends and build good-will.

He tackled the employment situation straightway. British shopkeepers, by a sort of tradition, had treated their salespeople pretty much as they treated their domestic servants.

They had been required to "live in," to eat inadequate food, supplied by the house, and compelled to spy upon one another, for all of which they received from £20 to £40 per year.

But at Selfridge's all this was changed. There were 1200 employes, all of whom were paid enough to live decently outside the building. And the result was, first, that the store's employment bureau was besieged from the beginning; second, that other London stores were faced with the unappetizing choice of changing their habits or losing their best people.

After a while, surprising news began to be whispered about. This American tradesman, Selfridge, it was said, had been "taken up by some of those very close to the King." Incredible! The truth was that some of the men in England, who were too high up to care a hoot whether a man was a retailer or snake-charmer, had met Selfridge, liked him immensely for his honesty, intelligence and enormous zest for life, and had become his friends. And once the large fish had led the way, the small fry quickly followed.

LINKED TO NOBILITY

During its first year the store lost money, but thereafter its profits rose until it was the second department store in point of sales in London. Selfridge married his three daughters to a prince, a count and a viscount and supported all three menages in fitting style. He bought cars before cars were common, flew in planes when planes were still military luxuries, first-nighted, entertained, traveled, bought and gave.

His son, Gordon, a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, is, I believe, the active head of the business now.

Anyway, Harry Gordon Selfridge, one of Chicago, Illinois, and once a partner of the great merchant, Marshall Field, has applied for British citizenship. Up to now he had renewed his American citizenship every 12 months, but now he asks for naturalization as a British subject.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

The belief that the government possesses some magic power that is not in the people who live under it is as old and as deceptive as the queer feeling that if you deposit $100 in each of ten different banks you will SOMEHOW have more than a thousand dollars.

Governments have no power which they do not draw directly from the strength, brains and pockets of the people—YOU AND ME.

The pitfall that yawns ahead of the American people today is the new-fangled belief that the government is a miracle-machine or a vast charitable institution.

"THE HISTORY OF LIBERTY IS THE HISTORY OF THE LIMITATION OF GOVERNMENT."

General Owen O'Duffy and his 750 Irish volunteers are leaving Spain. These fighting Irishmen could not stomach Spanish food and bull-ring brutality.

The pure Spaniard and the Irishman have the same Celtic roots. The Celts are Western European. It is probable that the Gauls, the Spaniards, the Irish, the Highland Scotchmen and the ancient inhabitants of England once spoke the same language.

General Leopold O'Donnell, of the famous fighting O'Donnell clan of Irish history, was a celebrated Spaniard of the 19th century. He was the Duke of Tetuan and was Premier of Spain in 1858.

The Duke of Wellington, who defeated Napoleon at Waterloo, was also an Irishman. He fought for the liberation of Spain against the rule of the Corsican and had, in 1813, supreme command of the Spanish armies. This Irishman was also a Spanish grandee.

It may be that General O'Duffy had before his eyes the hope of becoming another Wellington, but his soldiers could not be made to accept the Spanish onion for the honest old home-grown potato.

Dr. Leo Frobenius, who has spent forty years hunting for pictures and paintings made by the aborigines in rocks and caves in Italy, Spain, France and Africa, is giving an amazing, thrilling and awe-inspiring exhibition of the results of his work at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

These rock and cave artists were the Gutenbergs, the Rembrandts, the cartoonists, the caricaturists, the Kiplings, the newspaper writers of their day.

A woman in Texarkana, Texas, lugged her coffin in a church and had the pastor preach a funeral sermon over her.

In Papua, down in the South Seas, a woman collected so many dogs' teeth that she now uses them for money—and the natives take them.

A 73-year-old lifer in an Alabama jail gave up her parole and returned to the jail rather than live on Staten Island with relatives.
